Trashy Campaign Launched By B&U

Administering the affairs of a university the size of A&M can become a perplexing problem. Take for instance the controversy now raging in academic circles as to whether or not we should paint slogans on our new trash cans.

The Building and Utilities Department has unloaded this weighty question upon the student body, and Aggies far and wide must answer the call or forever be burdened with the product of their indecision.

Should a slogan or emblem be placed on the various experimental trash receptacles now adorning our sidewalks, or should they stand barren with no message of warning to those who would not consider their use?

B&U officials want to know. Students interested in contributing a slogan or emblem idea should fill out the accompanying form and return it via campus mail, to O. O. Haugen at the department office.

After careful consideration, though, somehow a slogan does not seem sufficient to encourage a trash can's frequent use. It is doubtful, say, that "Keep Your University Clean" would attract any more trash than "Tippicano and Tyler Too" or "Wait 'Til Next Year."

The solution seems to lie in reverse Aggies psychology. If orders were to be issued that only seniors were allowed to use the new receptacles, there would be so much privilege jumping that a thousand of the new cans could not hold the deluge. All Civilian freshmen, sophomores and juniors would make a practice of picking up campus trash and depositing it in the cans only to taunt their Corps counterparts.

And Corps underclassmen would stage midnight raids across the campus, picking up trash and overflowing the cans, much to the dismay of seniors who would only mutter, "Old Army is going to hell!"

TRASH CAN SLOGAN ENTRY

I think would be a good slogan.
 I think would be a good emblem.
 I think they should be left plain (check).

Correspondent Dispells Theory U.S. Forced Cuba Into Red Camp

In a calm and self-assured manner, Jules Dubois, roundup speaker for SCONA X, took charge of a press conference held in his behalf Thursday afternoon.

Speaking calmly, Dubois told of repeated attempts by the United States Government to aid the Cuban revolutionary government which in its infancy were turned down flatly on the direct orders of Fidel Castro.

Asked if the Cubans themselves are offering internal resistance to Castro, Dubois said, "There is a strong, silent resistance to the Castro dictatorship, but in a police state such as Cuba you can't expect government opposition to rise and shine."

Dubois commented at some length on his views about a speech to be given Friday in the United Nations by Castro's top lieutenant and chief military planner for the subversion Latin America.

"I believe," said Dubois, "he will hurl charges against the U.S. because of our continuing U-2 flights and will ask the U.N. to order the U.S. to cease the flights. I also feel that he will reiterate Castro's five points which includes our withdrawal from Guantanamo Naval Base and ask the Sino-Soviet delegation to attack the U.S. and Belgium for the mercy missions they sent to the Congo."

When asked if he thought Russia would step in if the Organization of American States made a move to initiate activities against Castro's Cuba, Dubois said: "I seriously doubt that Russia would interfere if the O.A.S. were to take action against Communist Cuba, provided that we reinforce our own flanks and prepare ourselves to fully support any action that is taken."

In answer to another question,

Dubois said, "Castro knows that he is a target for assassination and I feel that his assassination would make a tremendous difference in the situation in Cuba. Without Fidel Castro, the mystique of the revolution will disappear and the revolution will collapse."

Dubois stated that Castro is now on the economic ropes and this is the reason he started the sugar cane harvest one month earlier than usual. "At least 10 mills are reported grinding now," he said.

In conclusion, Dubois expressed the feeling that "only time will tell if efforts for a united Latin America will work out."

Weekend Movie Preview

"Only those who can suffer can love; only those who can love can live" seems to be the general underlying theme of two excellent movies showing over the weekend. Two Women, an Italian film will be showing Friday and Saturday nights at Guion Hall as part of the Foreign Film Series and East of Eden, sponsored by the English Society and Sigma Tau Delta, will be shown Monday night at the Campus Theatre as part of the Department of English's Film Classic Series.

East of Eden, generally remembered for James Dean's moving performance which sent him to stardom, is an Elia Kazan directed recapitulation of the Cain-Abel story. Adapted from John Steinbeck's novel of the same name, Eden tells the story of the conflict of the "good" brother, Aron (Richard Davalos) with the "bad" Cal (James Dean).

Cal is the more worldly, knowledgeable and resourceful of the pair and for his very wildness and "free spirit" personality loves and is loved by his brother's girl, Abra (Julie Harris). It is his ultimate regeneration through her response to his love and life which drives him and his brother apart.

This is brought about by his revelation to Aron, that their mother, believed to be long dead, is really the owner of two houses of prostitution.

The other revival of the weekend movie fare is Two Women, directed by Vittorio De Sica, based upon Alberto Moravia's novel with the screenplay by Cesare Zavattini. Sophia Loren received the Best Actress award at both the Cannes Film Festival and from the American Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for her portrayal of Cesira, the young widow, buffeted by the fortunes of war.

Cesira and her daughter, Rosetta, played by Eleanor Brown, are refugees in Italy during the Second World War. Forced into the mountains by the fighting, they manage to find some security and a love-relationship relationship with Michele, a Frenchman.

Michele is forced by some German soldiers to guide them through the mountains and it is later learned he was executed by them. Cesira and Rosetta, fleeing under pressure from the Germans are brutally raped in a bombed out church by a group of Moroccan soldiers.

The news of the death of Michele causes the bitterness in Rosetta's heart to dissolve and effect a reconciliator with her mother.
