

Juvenile Delinquency Meet Hosts State Youth Leader

By BOB ELMORE
Staff Writer

A community-wide meeting on "Youth Problems and Juvenile Delinquency—Causes, Detection, Pre-Treatment and Tested Solutions" will be held in Travis School Auditorium in Bryan at 7:30 p.m. March 11.

Dr. James A. Turman, Executive Director for the Texas Youth Council in Austin will speak.

Turman is responsible for seven state homes for boys and girls and supervises the continuing research and study of juvenile delinquency and youth problems across the state. He controls active paroles of children adjudged delinquent until they are discharged from the council's custody, and controls child neglect and delinquency on the community level with a personal staff.

A native of Franklin in Robertson County, Turman is married and has two sons. He has been a member of Governor Connally's Inter-Agency Board of Psychological Examiners and has been listed in Who's Who, South and Southwest.

He has served on both the American and Texas Psychologist Associations and is himself a Certified Psychologist by the Texas Board of Psychological Examiners.

Juvenile Delinquency in Texas as well as the nation is of course anything but a small problem. Every year the percentage of crime among minors increases at an alarming rate.

From the foreword of a handbook published by the Texas Youth Council entitled Prevention of Juvenile Delinquency the following excerpt is taken:

"Whenever a child develops all the intellectual, spiritual, moral, social, emotional and physical resources necessary for complete citizenship responsibility and participation, credit for his achievement also must be given his parents and his community. Whenever a child becomes delinquent, he cannot be absolved of all complexity but neither can his parents nor his community. If by neglect he becomes delinquent, the neglect is on the community level. If he is to be rehabilitated, he must be re-established in a community.

"The local community holds the key to youth achievement and development. The responsibilities and the opportunities of the local community cannot be ignored in any effort to prevent juvenile delinquency and crime."

Senior Elective Offered At Night In Journalism

A course in one of the newest areas in journalism — communications research — is being offered as a night class during the spring semester at A&M University.

It is Journalism 466, Techniques of Mass Communications, said Delbert McGuire, head of the Department of Journalism. It will meet once a week, from 7 to 9:30 p.m. every Thursday in Nagle Hall 6.

"The main value of the course," McGuire said, "is that it will give students an understanding of techniques of communications research and of current problems in journalism."

It is a senior-level, three credit hour course which is available for graduate credit, he said. It fits an undergraduate program or can be used in many of the graduate programs available at A&M.

"Persons who want to go beyond a bachelor's program or even beyond a master's program in the communications field will find that most graduate departments in journalism or communications require their students to design research problems right from the beginning," he added. "This class will help such individuals but is not limited to persons with those goals."

The course will not require any prior knowledge of statistical methods, he said. Further information about the class can be obtained from McGuire in his department office or by calling VI 6-6114.

McGuire will teach the class. He returned Jan. 29 from a year's advanced study at the University of Iowa.

Last day for registration for spring semester courses at A&M is Saturday.

Texas Legislature Adopts Redistricting Resolution; Wants Constitution Change

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Legislature went on record Thursday as asking Congress to call a constitutional convention intended to temper the Supreme Court's edict that population is the only guide for apportioning state legislatures.

The House adopted 112-33 a resolution which won unanimous Senate approval Tuesday.

In adopting the measure, the legislature joined Arizona, Arkansas, Idaho, Oklahoma and Virginia in seeking the constitutional convention.

If the legislatures of two-thirds of the states adopt identical resolutions, Congress is required by the Constitution to call the convention. The purpose of the convention would be to propose a constitutional amendment allowing one house of state legislatures to be apportioned on factors other than population. Approval by legislatures of three-fourths the states would be needed for ratification.

A small group of urban legislators tried in vain to destroy the resolution's effectiveness with amendments.

Lubbock Rep. Bill Parsley, the sponsor, told members "it must stay the same if we are to be effective at all."

Rep. Bob Eckhardt of Houston, one of the plaintiffs in the federal court case which brought an order to redistrict the legislature by Aug. 2, pleaded for referral of the measure to a committee.

"I don't really think the purpose of this is to change the Constitution, but for carrying out a program of foot-dragging with respect to redistricting this state," Eckhardt asserted.

Parsley said the amendment would return to the states some control over the composition of their legislatures.

Political Downpour Floods Legislators

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin got .76 of an inch of rain Thursday - but the Texas House of Representatives caught two inches in a pail.

The ornate roof of the 76-year-old Capitol sprung a leak during the night and an old grey bucket was hauled into the House chamber to catch the waterfall.

Lawmakers stumbled good-naturedly around the bucket, which soaked decidedly out of place on the plush gold-colored carpet.
