

A&M Grad Leads Air Commandos

John Teague, Congressman's Son, Is Member Of Special Force

A young Air Force officer who attended A&M is on the path to a distinguished military career—following the indelible World War II footprints of his famous father.

First Lieutenant John O. Teague, College Station, Tex., is a leader of one of the U. S. Air Force's most elite groups—Tactical Air Command's unique Air Commando combat control team. Its members, all handpicked volunteers, are among the most highly trained and versatile airmen in the world.

Lieutenant Teague's father, Congressman Olin E. Teague, was awarded the Silver Star, Bronze Star and Purple Heart—three times each—while earning his colonel's eagles commanding combat infantry units in World War II. Author and sponsor of the Korean War Veterans Bill, the distinguished U. S. House of Representatives member from Texas was subsequently elevated to the chairmanship of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, which he has now headed for more than half a decade.

Congressman Teague and Air Commando Teague are both alumni of Texas A&M, where father and son earned their service commissions through the ROTC program, classes of 1932 and 1959, respectively. However, many of the highly specialized skills the lieutenant must have for his present job have been acquired since he received his A&M sheepskin.

The commandos are always ready in any degree of strength and special skill needed to fly anywhere their unique talents in special air warfare may be required

—as advisers, trainers or combatants if the need should arise. Lieutenant Teague and his Air Commando combat controller teammates are trained for a role in special air warfare. Their combat job is to parachute near or into enemy areas minutes to hours before paratroops and assault airlift landings of troops, equipment and supplies.

On the ground they secretly set up portable communications and other guidance equipment brought with them and accurately direct Air Commando assault airlift aircraft into the airdrop and assault landing zones. When required, they can also direct airstrikes.

Team members must develop unusual proficiency in making pinpoint paratroop landings into extremely small areas—such as jungle clearings. Every Air Commando combat controller must be a qualified control tower operator and radio repair technician.

All team members must be in prime physical condition; expert in survival measures in any climate, any type of terrain or in the water, anywhere in the world; highly trained in escape and evasion techniques and exceptionally proficient in the use of maps and compass.

Even though successful mission accomplishment in their combat operations dictates that they avoid contact with the enemy, every Air Commando combat controller must be a merciless individual fighting man, expert in lethal use of his rifle, pistol, knife and his hands and feet when close ground combat is forced upon him.

C of C Drive Going Well

Early responses from cards mailed to A&M staff and faculty members urging them to invest in the Bryan-College Station Chamber of Commerce during 1965 has been encouraging, Clark Munroe, director of the A&M Personnel Office and campus drive chairman, said late Thursday.

Munroe said membership cards were not mailed to campus personnel until late Monday but a number of them have already been returned with checks.

"I would like to see the campus portion of the drive completed as soon as possible. To do this we must have the membership cards returned to my office along with the membership checks not later than the first part of next week," he said.

Chamber of Commerce Membership Drive Chairman Jim Ingram reported Thursday that volunteers, including those working on the campus, had received pledges of $52,524 toward the budget goal of $63,558 and signed up 837 members.

Prof To Lecture At St. Edwards

Professor John A. McIntyre of the Cyclotron Institute at A&M will serve as a visiting lecturer at St. Edwards University in Austin March 10 and 11.

He will visit under the auspices of the American Association of Physics Teachers and the American Institute of Physics.

16 Game Wardens Enroll In Course

Sixteen men enrolled this week in the 16th Game Warden's School at A&M.

The men will receive 16 weeks of training, ranging from basic wildlife courses to law to physical education. They will spend eight hours a day in the classroom and at least two additional hours in study sessions.

Director of the school is Bob Evins, district conservation chief in San Antonio for the Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife. Other instructors will be faculty members at A&M and Parks and Wildlife officers from various areas of the state.

Currently identified as Game Warden trainees, the men who successfully complete the school will be certified as Game Wardens I, a classification they will retain for at least a year. Evins said the school is equivalent to 23 hours of college work. Trainees are required to have at least a high school diploma. They also must be between 21 and 40 and at least five feet, eight inches tall.

Unlike college students, the trainees receive a salary while in school. They also wear khaki uniforms and caps. Although they stay in a college dormitory, trainees are free to eat where they choose.

The curriculum includes wildlife management practices, fish and pond management, public speaking, first aid, drivers education, records and reports, public relations, civil defense, field trips, boating and water safety. A laboratory session for the study of birds and fish is also included.

Recorders Found In Strange Places

By JOHN CHADWICK WASHINGTON (AP) — Beware of the olive in your martini, or the vase of flowers or the paper napkin on your desk. Senators learned Thursday that these and many other everyday articles may conceal tiny gadgets that can record and transmit anything you say.

A demonstration of electronic eavesdropping devices was put on by a Senate Judiciary subcommittee began hearings of what Chairman Edward V. Long, D-Mo., called alleged invasions of privacy by "deral agencies."

Shortly after Long made his opening statement, his remarks were played back from a tiny radio transmitter hidden in a vase of roses on the big committee table. Poking into the roses, Long found a transmitter "about the size of your thumbnail."

This initial session was given over to displaying and demonstrating what Lang termed "snooping tools" — gadgets that ranged from wristwatch microphones to a telephone attachment that makes it possible to dial a number and listen to the conversation in the room to which the call is made, even if the phone is not taken off the hook.

In showing this latter device, Emanuel Mittleman of Brooklyn, N. Y., said it could be activated by direct dialing of a number from a distance — even from as far away as Hawaii.

Earlier, Harold K. Lipset, a San Francisco private detective demonstrated a variety of other devices used for surreptitiously picking up and transmitting conversations.

One was a martini glass in which he placed an olive that was a radio transmitting unit. Stuck in the olive was a toothpick that served as the aerial. Lipset said the device works "when it is covered with the liquid in the glass."

FORGOTTEN ANYTHING

No, not a single thing! Mom always shops carefully for her family. She watches their health. She makes sure they have a clean, comfortable home. She sees that they get practically anything they want. What more can she do?

Well, how about their spiritual well-being? A family needs a religious framework in which to develop moral responsibility and steadfast faith. If Mom and Dad set a fine example of Christian love and regular church attendance, the family cannot help but be influenced. Today's young people, strengthened and inspired by Church teachings, are the leaders that our country will need tomorrow.

Remember, Mom... "Man's life consists not in the abundance of things which he possesses." Don't deprive your family or yourself of the many precious values the Church can give.
