2 A&M Staffers To Attend Confab

Two Texas A&M faculty members will attend a legislature-sponsored meeting in Austin today to study compensation and benefits of faculty at state-supported colleges and universities. House Speaker Ben Barnes invited Dr. John Treacy, president of the A&M chapter of the American Association of University Professors, and Dr. Henry Rakoff, who heads the A&M chapter of the Texas Association of College Teachers.

The Texas Legislature adopted a resolution calling for the appointment of an interim committee to make the faculty study. Determining the means to recruit and retain the most capable, qualified and effective teaching personnel will be the committee aim, Barnes said.

The speaker will announce his appointees to the committee Thursday.

Kuvlesky Co-Authors Magazine Article

Dr. William P. Kuvlesky, assistant professor in the Department of Agricultural Economics and Sociology, is co-author of the lead article appearing in the current issue of the Journal of Rural Sociology.

The article titled "The Meaning of Rurality in American Society," by the A&M sociologist, is co-authored with Professors Robert C. Bealer and F. K. Willits of Pennsylvania State University. Through the separation of ecological, occupational and socio-cultural dimensions, the authors offer a clarification of the concept of rurality.

Kuvlesky joined the A&M staff in the fall of 1964 and was granted his Ph.D. degree in sociology from Pennsylvania State University this summer.

Litterst and Page are among 12 specialists in various fields conducting adult education programs throughout the state under a cooperative program between the Texas Education Agency and A&M. Bob Jaska, associate professor in A&M's Department of Agricultural Education, coordinates the program for the university.

"This cooperative system is designed to make the services of specialists available to conduct short courses under the supervision of public schools," Jaska said. "Such a program enables teachers of vocational agriculture to provide improved educational services to farm people."

He said Litterst and Page will each conduct three short courses per month, or about 30 a year, for adult and Young Farmer groups.

Specialists are now available in the fields of beef production, farm management, farm electrification, farm arc welding, swine production, tractor maintenance, dairy science, oxy-acetylene welding, and pasture improvement.

Litterst is a 1943 A&M graduate in animal husbandry. He was an instructor in the Veterans Agriculture Program in Hays County four years and then district sales manager for Burrus Feed Mills in Fort Worth four years. Next came management of the Baldwin Feed and Cattle Company working with ranchers in Travis and Shelby Counties until 1964.

Litterst has successfully operated his own ranching and farming business consisting of registered and commercial cattle, sheep, Angora goats, pecans and grain farming. He is a former director in the State Shorthorn Breeders Association and a member of the American Angus Association and the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

Page holds bachelor and masters degrees in agricultural education from Texas Technological College, received in 1952 and 1954, and has taught vocational agriculture for 13 years. He taught farm electrification to high school students, young and adult farmers, and participated in farm electrification short courses at A&M and in Austin.

Page recently completed an intensified three-week short course in electrification at A&M sponsored by the Texas Farm Electrification Committee.

Anatomy Department Adds New Members

Two new faculty members have joined the Department of Anatomy in Texas A&M's College of Veterinary Medicine, announces Dr. J. H. Millif, head of the department.

The instructors are Dr. Michael E. Tatum and Dr. Lionel G. Garcia. Tatum received his B.S. degree in animal science in 1963 from A&M. He was employed by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Sonora before joining the faculty at A&M.

Garcia received his B.S. in biology in 1956 and his Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree in 1965 from A&M. He was in the U.S. Army for 18 months and was employed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture prior to returning to A&M and for his DVM.

Garcia was the recipient of several outstanding awards while an undergraduate, including Faculty Achievement Award of Merit, Merck Award and the Texas Veterinary Medical Association Auxiliary Award.
