B. M. HACKNEY

TEES Program Names Hackney To Top Post

B. M. Hackney, a teacher trainer for nine years with Texas A&M's Engineering Extension Service, has been named head of vocational industrial teacher training for TEES.

He replaces F. J. Konecny, who also was assistant director. Konecny recently became assistant director of the James Connally Technical Institute at Waco.

TEES Director H. D. Bearden announced Hackney's promotion. The teacher training staff provides facilities for recruitment, counseling, selection and pre-employment training for industrial teaching positions in public schools.

Hackney earned a M.Ed. degree in industrial education at A&M and a B.B.A. at Baylor University. He is working toward a doctorate in education at A&M.

Prior to joining TEES, Hackney was a district supervisor for the Vocational Services Division of the Texas Education Agency for seven years. He taught two years in Waco Public Schools, operated a marine supply company in Denison, instructed at the U. S. Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi, and for Boeing Aircraft Company, Seattle, Wash.

Hackney is a member of the American Vocational Association, National Association of Industrial Teacher Educators, Texas Association for Directors and Supervisors of T & I Education, American Technical Education Association, Vocational Industrial Club of Texas, Iota Lambda Sigma, Phi Delta Kappa and the National Society for Programmed Instruction.
