

Psychology Prof To Give 2 Talks

Dr. William J. Robinson, Texas A&M associate professor of educational psychology, will give major addresses in San Antonio and Memphis, Tenn., this month.

Robinson will discuss "Articulation in Secondary School and Junior Colleges" and "Articulation in Junior and Senior Colleges" in an Oct. 17-18 address to the Mid-South Junior College Conference in Memphis.

The conference is sponsored by the U. S. Office of Education and the University of Tennessee.

"Psychological Principles Involved in Programming" will be the topic of Robinson's address to the Texas A&M Agricultural Extension Services Conference, scheduled Oct. 25-28 in San Antonio.

Prominent Educator Urges State Planning

State planning for junior and senior colleges was endorsed Monday by a California education specialist.

Dr. Leland Medsker, professor and vice chairman of the University of California's Center for the Study of Higher Education, spoke to 100 administrators attending the 22nd Junior College Conference at Texas A&M. He said the new higher education coordinating board should be concerned with opportunities for junior college students who transfer to senior colleges and universities.

"Articulation will take place by default if it is not planned," Medsker commented. "But articulation by design is more workable."

The speaker predicted "unbelievable change" in the junior college picture within the next two to five years.

"There is already an increase of public awareness of problems of articulation between two and four-year institutions of higher education," Medsker said. "The crest of 18-year olds came this year. It will be larger again in 1969 and increase 12 per cent more than at present by 1979."

"There is mounting pressure toward dispersion of authority and greater recognition of students in planning and developing of institutions," he added.

Medsker said in 1963 Texas was second only to California in transfer students. Texas had 18,000 transfer students, more than half of which transferred from community colleges to senior colleges, he said.

"As the cost of education continues to climb," Medsker continued, "there will be more students attending college at home."

"Through counseling, we in the junior colleges need to help the student choose the right program and the right institution in which to do his senior college work," he noted. "And counselors can be helpful at the senior college and high school level. Many students still choose the wrong college for them at the outset."

Medsker pointed to the need for the smooth transfer of junior college students without the loss of credits. He called for the development of grading standards which would aid in the admission and retention of junior college transfers.

"There is also a need for exchange of information on instructional techniques," he said.

Oceanography Prof Authors 2 Articles

Dr. Sayed El-Sayed, assistant professor of oceanography at Texas A&M, is co-author of two articles in the American Geophysical Union's Antarctic Research series.

El-Sayed teamed with Enrique F. Mandelli of the Argentine Navy Hydrographic Service on "Primary Production and Standing Crop of Phytoplankton in the Weddell Sea and Drake Passage."

Among The Profs Vet Deans Elected To National Group

Dr. Fred D. Maurer, associate dean of veterinary medicine at Texas A&M has been elected a member of the Council on Research of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

Maurer, known for his research with viruses and animal diseases, is a consultant to the Animal Disease Eradication Division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the Illinois Center for Zoonoses Research, and the Morris Animal Foundation.

He served as field director of a research team in Africa for a joint project of the Department of Defense and the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Maurer holds a Ph.D. degree from Cornell University, New York, and a D.V.M. degree from Washington State University. He is a former director of the Division of Medicine at the U. S. Army's Medical Research Laboratory at Fort Knox, Ky., and holds membership in many organizations devoted to research on animal diseases.

The Council on Research of the 18,000-members AVMA is responsible for plans to encourage scientific development in the veterinary profession.

Hubert To Address Graduate Students

Dr. Frank W. R. Hubert, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, will be guest speaker for the Texas A&M graduate student banquet Oct. 30.

Wallace Johnson, president of the graduate student council, said all graduate students and their wives are invited to attend the 7 p.m. banquet in the Memorial Student Center Ballroom.

Tickets, $3 each, may be purchased from graduate student council members, or by mail from John Hoyle, Room 108, Academic Building.
