

Tech, SMU Given Nod In Cage Race

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
The roundballers start practice in the Southwest Conference Friday and there's a dramatic story brewing.
Norman Reuther, whose failure to pass sufficient work lost the championship for Texas Tech last winter, is returning and his presence might bring Tech the title it couldn't win without him. Now Texas Tech will be the favorite instead of Southern Methodist. Tech will have seven lettermen, including Dub Malaise, one of the best in the nation. It also will have Bob Glover, the heralded Dallas schoolboy star who was scholastically ineligible for a year.

Southern Methodist is going to have a fine team and Coach Doc Hayes says if he can come up with a good fifth man to go with his established starters — Carroll Hooser, Bob Begert, Denny Holman and Charley Beasley — he might well win the championship. Probably his main hope is a 6-6 sophomore named John Higginbotham to be the fifth man on his team.

A&M has John Beasley, the 6-6 star considered the best player in the conference, and Randy Matson, the 6-6½ shot put champion. The recent addition of Matson has moved the Aggies up about three notches in pre-season polls. Most Coach Shelby Metcalf has to worry about is a floor man, somebody to get the ball to Beasley.

Baylor could be the dark horse with Darrell Hardy, the sensational sophomore of last season, to lead the way. Baylor also has a boy up from the freshmen — Jimmy Turner — who's quite a playmaker. And there is a junior college transfer from California, Jerry Evans, 6-7, who averaged 12 rebounds per game along with 18 points last season.

Texas Christian, which won only three conference games but lost five in the last 30 seconds, has almost everybody back, headed by Gary Turner, who flipped in 482 points. Mickey McCarty, a 6-5 youngster up from the freshmen, could make the team despite all of the veterans' strength.

Texas lost John Paul Fultz and Larry Franks, both mighty good men, but the Longhorns still look tough what with Mike Gammon, Mickey and Minton White and sophomores Gary Overbeck and Billy Arnold, and a transfer from Lon Morris College, Noel Stout, who was a teammate of Bob Glover at Dallas Jefferson High School.

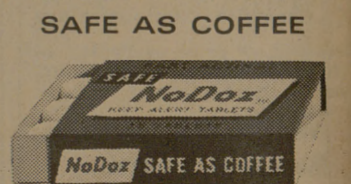

Arkansas has everybody back except Jim Kisse and should be improved but not quite up to making a run for the title because of a lack of height.

Rice, which won only one conference game, is bound to be improved because it will have about a dozen returnees, including a fine player indeed in Doug McKendrick. He scored 460 points last year.
