Reds Aid Protests Counterspy Claims

By GLENN DROMGOOLE
Battalion Editor

Herbert Philbrick of "I Led Three Lives" television fame told the Bryan-College Station Knife and Fork Club Monday night that the recent college protests on Viet Nam employed communist philosophy.

"The first step in communist training is to destroy patriotism," the former Communist Party member and FBI counterspy said. "If you want to see a good example of it, just take a look at some of the statements made in these anti-Viet Nam demonstrations last week."

"After they break down all patriotism, all moral code," Philbrick said, "the communists replace it with communist code of morality. The communists believe that only those acts are moral which contribute to the building of communism."

Philbrick told the club that communists are aiming at colleges for increased strength and that they are very selective in choosing members.

"If they can recruit one communist from each college and university in the United States, they've got it made," he said.

The speaker, who spent nine years as a citizen, communist and counterspy, said communism now controls 1,000,000,000 people and more than one-third of the world's population are communists.

Philbrick, who never received a salary for his FBI counterspy work, said he got into the communist movement by mistake in 1940 when he and his wife joined the Cambridge (Mass.) Youth Council, a communist front organization camouflaged as a legitimate pacifist and freedom group.

Six months later, Philbrick said he discovered the council was "phony, fraud and was dominated by people I seriously considered to be members of the communist criminal conspiracy."

By then, however, he was president of the organization. He withdrew from the council and told the FBI of the group's activities. For the next nine years, Philbrick served as a counterspy for the bureau.

He said the communists use front organizations as transmission belts for communist propaganda and recruiting grounds.

"Here it is that the communists look for future members of the communist criminal conspiracy," Philbrick said.

"These organizations were being used to convey communist propaganda from out of the secrecy of the communist criminal front.

"The party continues to use more than 150 of these youth groups," the expert noted.

Philbrick said in his nine years he met only one Russian, that almost all leaders of the communist movement in America are Americans.

William Z. Foster, former party head in this country, wrote, "Within the communists the end justifies the means. Whether his tactics be legal or moral or not is not of any concern to him if it suits his purposes."

Philbrick said Gus Hall, present party leader here, makes frequent appearances at colleges and universities across the nation.

"I don't think that any college that invites a known communist to speak can be called a leading college or university," the speaker claimed.

Philbrick recalled Hall's comments when questioned about his communist affiliation.

"I prefer America with a Soviet government," Hall declared. He further told interrogators that he would take up arms "at the right time" to overthrow constituted authority in the United States, Philbrick said.

Philbrick stressed public awareness as an effective combatant to communism.

"Certainly one big reason for their success is the apathy of the American people," he said.

Lecture Series To Present Seminary President Tonight

Dr. James I. McCord, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, will speak at 8 p.m. Oct. 26 in the Memorial Student Center.

McCord's talk, "A Christian Humanism", is the first of the free, public University Lecture Series.

A native of Rusk, McCord is former dean and professor of systematic theology at the Austin Presbyterian Seminary. He has also served as pastor of Austin's University Presbyterian Church and professor of Bible at the University of Texas.

McCord has lectured in theological seminaries in Canada, Scotland, Europe and the United States, and has written numerous articles and reviews.

Past chairman of the North American Area Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, McCord is chairman of the advisory committee on faith and order of the National Council of Churches; a member of the committee on faith and order, World Council of Churches; and past chairman, Consultation on Church Union.

The speaker earned a Doctor of Divinity Degree at Austin College, plus an M.A. at the University of Texas and a B.A. at Austin College. He also studied at Harvard, Edinburgh and Geneva.

13 Freshmen Get Conduct Probation

By TOMMY DeFRANK

Thirteen Baylor University students were placed under severe disciplinary regulation by a Baylor faculty committee Monday after the students admitted connection in last week's painting spree on the Texas A&M campus.

The group, all freshmen, were placed on full conduct probation with any minor misconduct resulting in automatic expulsion from school.

The students also agreed to the following terms of probation: The seven who own cars must give them up;

All 13 must be in their dormitories at 8 p.m. for the balance of the semester;

No class cuts will be allowed unless absences are excused;

The group must personally pay the cost of repairing the paint damage;

A committee of five Baylor faculty members must personally deliver a letter of apology to A&M Student Body President Roland Smith.

Each student connected with the incident signed statements agreeing to the terms and similar papers were sent to each boy's parents. The parents must also agree to the probation or the students will be expelled.

Baylor Dean of Students W. C. Perry said Monday that the students were not dismissed because they were freshmen.

"They are just a bunch of young kids who got some wild ideas," Perry said. "If they had been older students there is no question that they would have been expelled."

Baylor Student Body President Danny Chapman sent a letter addressed to "the students of Texas A&M" Monday apologizing for the incident.

The text read: "On behalf of the student body of Baylor University, may I take this opportunity to express my sincere and deepest regret for the painting incident which occurred on your campus.

"May I also assure you that this does not demonstrate the general attitude of the Baylor student body toward the Corps and the students of A&M, but rather is an isolated incident resulting from a misunderstanding that new students at a Southwest Conference university will develop concerning campus relations. Remedial action is underway by Baylor administrators and student officials and steps will be taken when all information is in.

"It is the wish of the students of Baylor to foster understanding and good sportsmanship between our schools at all times. Incidents such as this are unfortunate and I am sure it will take some time to repair university relations between our two schools. The students of Baylor will endeavor to do our very best to achieve this goal."

An estimate of the damage caused by the paintings was not complete Tuesday but the figure was expected to reach several hundred dollars.

"Let it be known that my opinion in this matter will be shared with the group concerned."

Members of Sigma Kappa fraternity displayed a goat preceded by a banner reading "The New Aggie Sweetheart" twice during the game, including once before new Aggie sweetheart Cheri Holland was presented during halftime ceremonies.

Game Incident Draws Apology From TCU

A letter protesting the actions of the Texas Christian University fraternity during the A&M-TCU game Oct. 16 was dropped Monday after A&M student leaders received an apology from the TCU student body president.

A portion of the letter, written by John McDonald, reads as follows:

"I hope I can speak for the majority of students in apologizing for the conduct of some of our student body. The first float which was carried around the field during the halftime was in good taste, and your reaction to it was praiseworthy. I wish to thank your cheerleaders and your officers for the control and leadership which they exhibited. This, to me, shows an improvement over what has been, if not in actuality, an innate dislike of Aggie spirit. I wish to praise you for the conduct of the Corps in general.

"Nevertheless, I feel compelled to apologize to you and to the Corps and to all students of Texas A&M University for the conduct of the group who tried to poke fun at your school through your sweetheart. That little episode with the goat was in extremely poor taste, and the students of TCU wish to express to your student body our apology. Moreover, I wish to thank you for the mature way in which you handled this "insult."

Silver Taps Honors 2 Aggies

WAYNE H. WERDUNG

Silver taps was held Monday night for Joe B. Wilson and Wayne H. Werdung, Texas A&M sophomores, who died recently from burns received in a car wreck Oct. 15 in Fort Worth.

Werdung who died Monday in Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, was suffering from second and third degree burns over 78 per cent of his body. Wilson, also being treated at BAMC, died Sunday from burns that covered 80 per cent of his body.

Werdung's father who had been on active duty in Viet Nam, had flown in to be with his son.

The accident that finally claimed the pair's lives, occurred while they were in Ft. Worth for the Corps trip. They were parked at a red light when a car slammed into their rear, driving them into another car and ripped open their fuel tank.

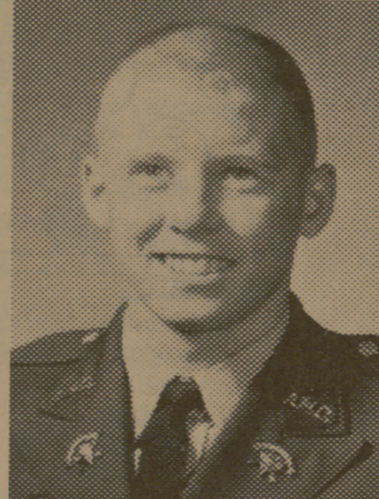

The gasoline ignited, setting their clothing on fire. Several bystanders gave assistance but both were severely burned before the fire could be extinguished.

At first there was still some hope that they might live, Monday Wilson's father said that his son could hear and understand what was going on. A physician treating Werdung at BAMC said that he was making what he termed "satisfactory progress."

Monday, the day that he died, was Werdung's birthday. He was 20 years old.

Werdung was from O'Fallon, Ill. and Wilson was from Texarkana.

Werdung was a member of Squadron 8 and majored in industrial engineering while Wilson belonged to Squadron 7 and majored in mechanical engineering.
