

FROM THE Sidelines

By Larry R. Jerden

Contrary to rumors some may have heard, the Aggies will play out the rest of their schedule! The A&M gridders, like their TU counterparts, are in a two-game losing streak. When the Aggies do something, they do it well, and Saturday's loss was the best they've done at playing fold-up since the Florida fiasco of 1962 when they went down 42-6. It was their worst SWC defeat since TCU ran away with a 39-6 win in 1959.

But all was not lost for the followers of the Maroon and White! Phil Scoggin continued his fine punting, averaging 46.3 for 11 punts, including four in a row over 50 yards. And the Aggie Band has yet to lose a halftime.

The season must go on and the Aggies are now preparing to tour the "Land of Opportunity," the state ruled by Orville E. Faubus, Frank Broyles and King Football.

Things looked good for a while: there was a rumor that Harry Jones, the Hogs top ground gainer, wouldn't be able to start against the Cadets. Probably fear. Latest word is he will play. Oh well, you can't have everything! Some team's replacements are almost as good as their first stringers, anyway.

The Aggies have a way of playing well against good teams, so maybe that was the trouble Saturday. If this be the case, the Farmers should look great Saturday night. The Aggies beat the Sips when they were number one, even with what's his-name coaching, and besides, there is more at stake than just a ball game Saturday. There is one of the few Aggie records still in the books!

In the long history of SWC football, A&M has fielded some good teams. The 1939-40 crews were two of the best, and they set the record for the longest winning streak in the conference. It stands to this day. After 25 years. A quarter of a century. No one has ever won more than 19 games in a row in our conference. Arkansas won number 18 Saturday night . . . and guess who will have to defend A&M's record!

Well, there's the challenge, folks. Make Something Happen.

Going into Saturday's game the Aggies boasted the top pass defense in the SWC. That went out with the Baylor Bombers pro-type attack, but for those still interested in statistics Harry Ledbetter is still number two in passing, and Dude McLean is third in receiving.

For the faithful the Texas A&M Club of Arkansas will have a hospitality suite in the Hotel Lafayette at Sixth and Louisiana in Little Rock. It'll be open Friday evening after 6 and Saturday from 9-5. Little Rock is a great town, take it from this ex-Porker fan, and the Arkansas people are friendly as can be . . . especially to their victims.

The unfortunate incident in Kyle Field Saturday was the swan song for John West, Sports Editor of the Bryan Daily Eagle. He's been with the Bird for five years and is now moving to A&M University Information.

Leave it to John to find some winning Aggies. His first release at his new job tells of Billy Martindale, '61, and Bobby Nichols, '59, coming in second and third in the Sahara Invitational Golf Tournament. Martindale picked up $12,000 and Nichols took home $7,500.

J. Gordon Gay To Again Don Apron For Senior-Gridders' Steak Fry

J. Gordon Gay will don his apron for another steak fry at Hensel Park when the senior class honors the football players Tuesday.

For the past 15 years, Gay, who is the campus YMCA general secretary, has developed a "knack" for frying steaks. Averaging approximately seventy-eight steak fries a year, the volunteer "chef" says he feeds more than 5,000 Aggies and their guests during this period. He has cooked for as many as 400 persons at one time. Gay adds that he sometimes cooks at 28 steak fries in 20 days.

Even the weather doesn't greatly affect the steak fries. He recalls often frying a steak with one hand and holding an umbrella with the other trying to keep the rain from ruining the meat and fire. Gay says that because the cookout area at Hensel Park is sandy, he can begin cooking the steaks 30 minutes after it has rained. It seems, though, that the weather is the least of his worries. Once, he recalls, after he had built the fires in the ovens, he returned to find some children had put the fires out.

AGGIE SURROUNDED BY BEARS
Halfback Jim Stabler heads for an unwelcomed reception as three Baylor Bears prepare to greet him after a short gain. Action took place during Baylor's 31-0 rout of the Aggies Saturday.

Consolidated Blasted 61-27 By Hot Brenham Cubs

By BOB JONES
A&M Consolidated's Tigers look for their first District 10-AAA win this Friday when they host the Cypress-Fairbanks Bobcats at 7:30 p.m. on Tiger Field.

Consolidated will spend this week regrouping its forces from the 61-27 walloping they received Friday from Brenham. Head Coach Edsel Jones and his troops never started moving in the Brenham homecoming contest.

Playing before a crowd of 3,000, Brenham chalked up 46 points in the first half while the Tigers mustered only seven points. Brenham edged the score to 54-7 in the third quarter. The Tigers made a bid for the win in the fourth period but found themselves short of the necessary time.

Fred Davis made his quarterbacking debut in the contest. The stocky junior commanded the Maroon and White from the tailback position as the Tigers tried to gain the lead employing a spread-passing shotgun offense. Davis hit half of his passes, connecting on 14 of 28 attempts.

Cypress-Fairbanks will be meeting the Bengals on near equal terms Friday. Both teams lost their first two district games. The Bobcats fell to Conroe and Huntsville and the Tigers dropped league games to Houston Furr and Brenham.

Although Cypress holds the upper hand on experienced players with 15 returning lettermen from last season's district title-holder.

Chess Tournament Planned By MSC

The MSC Chess Committee will hold its annual A&M Chess Championship Friday at 7:30 in rooms 2B and 2C of the Memorial Student Center.

The tournament will follow the Swiss system consisting of three rounds, each with a time limit of 30 moves in 30 minutes.

David Willis will be the director of this year's tourney.

The tournament is open to all students of A&M and there will be no entry fee charged.

Baylor Downs Aggie

By LARRY R. JERDEN
Battalion Sports Editor
Something didn't happen. The Aggies' passes didn't hit, their tackles were only made after five yard gains, pass protection was nonexistent, and 99 yards total offense just isn't enough to win a ball game. Especially when the opposition rolls up 476 yards, including 286 in the air by a third-string quarterback.

The deepest penetration the Aggies could muster was in the fourth quarter when they charged to the Baylor 19. The offensive weapon used in this drive was the habitual use of the red flag by officials that moved the Cadets 45 yards in five "plays." What looked like an Aggie threat was squelched by the second most unbelievable play of the day.

Harry Ledbetter threw the bomb, but it was intercepted. The alert Bear ran around the field a while before fumbling, the Aggies recovered, and then the ball went out of bounds, or something like that. Anyway, it was all topped off with a 15-yarder walked off in the direction of the Aggie goal, and that was it for the day.

About the only play in Baylor's game of catch that created anything like excitement came in the closing minutes of the second quarter.

Kenny Stockdale, the Bear passer, handed off to Richard DeFee going to his left. Aggie Head Coach Gene Stallings began yelling "reverse" as hard as he could from the sidelines when he saw split end George Cheshire looping to his right. Sure enough, it was a reverse.

But simply a reverse, it wasn't. Cheshire took only a few steps with the pigskin when he flipped it back to Stockdale who was fading back toward his own goal.

During all this backfield thing the Aggies could not get on the speed, met the ball on the five yard line and tried to fashion a 17-0 half score.

Phil Scoggin was the only thing the Aggies could put on an offense or a defense. He suddenly came out on the Bears with 11 punts for a 46.3 average, including for a row of 50 yards or more. Perhaps this factor alone helped the score down to 31-0.

For a team that wouldn't be embarrassed by anyone, the Aggies made something happen and produced statements like "Aggies Are Back" just a few weeks ago, the Cadets made a poor showing. They play Arkansas next. That's a lot of things back to do.
