600 Gallons Of Diesel Fuel To Ignite 'Hot' Bonfire

Aggies like their bonfires hot. The Firemen's Training Division of the Texas A&M Engineering Extension Service, charged with fueling the annual bonfire, hopes to make Wednesday's bonfire the hottest in history.

"We plan to pump or spray 400 to 600 gallons of diesel fuel, or whatever amount is necessary, to give 'em the hottest blaze," commented John Rauch of the FTS.

Rauch explained the FTS operation: "We ran a three-quarter inch pipe line underground from the street and attached it 22 feet up the center pole to pump the fuel inside the stack."

"Wednesday, about 4 p.m., as soon as all the logs are in place, we will spray 400 gallons of diesel and 200 more gallons on the stack about 30 minutes before it is put to the torch."

When the firemen begin fueling the stack, the Corps of Cadets will form a human security chain around the 75-foot-high pyre.

Aiding Rauch in the project are FTS instructors Tom Robinson, Paul Williams, Jim Bland and W. B. Dorman, plus Leonard Bishop of the Petroleum Engineering Department and Harold Sorensen, a student instructor for FTS.

When yell leaders hurl torches to trigger the blaze at 7:30 p.m., the result should be an awesome holocaust, symbolizing the "burning desire of every Aggie to beat Texas in the Thanksgiving day football game."
