

A&M, Kilgore Plan Co-op Grad Program

Texas A&M is firming up plans to teach graduate engineering courses in conjunction with Kilgore College next fall.

The extension program, one of five which A&M's College of Engineering offers in industrial areas, will provide evening classes for East Texas plant engineers who need background in new technology.

"We believe this program will be of real assistance to the heavy industry of East Texas," Dr. G. D. Hallmark, head of A&M's Department of Electrical Engineering, noted. "Texas A&M is pleased to provide this service."

The September pilot program will be a course in electrical engineering: linear network analysis. Future offerings may include mathematics, chemical engineering and other disciplines, as requested by industry.

Dr. S. L. Canterbury, dean of engineering at Kilgore College who earned a Ph.D. in electrical engineering at A&M in 1945, will coordinate the East Texas extension program. Recommended for associate membership in A&M's graduate faculty, he will teach some of the courses; others will be taught by regular faculty members from College Station. Classes will meet on the Kilgore College campus.

The cost of classes, including an instructor's pay and travel, will be borne by the student or his company, Hallmark said. In addition, a registration fee of $10 per semester hour for A&M and a $5 per semester fee will be added for use of Kilgore College's facilities. Courses may be used for credit toward the Master of Engineering degree, he pointed out.

Requirements for enrollment include a bachelor's degree in science, mathematics or engineering, and admission to graduate study by Texas A&M. Application forms are available from Dr. Canterbury, Hallmark said.

Tunisians Enroll For Ag Training

Fourteen future agriculture teachers at Chott Maria Agricultural College in Tunisia are scheduled to register as freshmen this spring semester at Texas A&M.

The Tunisians will work toward B.S. degrees in different fields of agriculture.

Chott Maria Agricultural College is a land-grant type of school near Sousse, Tunisia.

The new trainees comprise the fourth group of Tunisians to participate in the United States Agency for International Development at A&M.

Chemistry Wives To Meet Tonight

The Graduate Chemistry Wives Club will meet at 8 p.m. Thursday at Hanson's Meat and Freezer Service.
