

Aggies Go For Bulletin Board

AGGIE TRADING POST
By LANI PRESSWOOD

During class hours, one of the liveliest places on the Texas A&M campus is the bulletin board on the first floor of the Academic Building.

Where else can you find a bayonet, a car refrigerator and a parachute rig for sale at the same time? Or a matched set of .45 caliber target pistols for $250, or a chance to sell pictures of the Bonfire in the Hensel-College View area on weekends?

These are but a few of the wide variety of advertisements to be found virtually anytime on the heavily-used board.

The board contains nine rows of homemade signs, most either notecards or paper slips of a similar size. There are separate sections labeled "Lost," "Found," "For Sale," "Wanted," and "Misc.," although few advertisers take advantage of the convenient classifications.

A recent inspection of this overgrown section of want ads produced a typical assortment of merchandise.

Textbooks and uniforms were the most numerous items advertised, and in these categories everything from a nuclear engineering text to a pair of senior boots could be found.

Used automobiles closely followed in frequency, with Volkswagens, Plymouths, Buicks, Chevrolets, Mercurys and a Pontiac all making the list. Several motorcycles and a 40-foot mobile home were also up for sale.

And one Aggie put out a desperate call for a "4.11 Chevy Rear" that he needed before the weekend.

For music lovers there was a piano, guitar and trombone, along with several radios, stereo sets, amplifiers and tape recorders.

A muscular type could pick up a set of barely-used barbells for only $19 while a slow reader could take eight lessons in speed-reading for a mere thirty dollars.

There were several attention-getting devices in evidence that would have done credit to Madison Avenue. One advertiser wrote "SEX" in large block lettering at the top of his card. Below it was a message in smaller letters beginning, "now that I have your attention, would you be interested in . . ."

Another card read: "Attention Matthew Brady Fan Club Members—Be Ready For The Next Civil War With This." Written underneath this come-on was an ad for a Polaroid camera.

The advertisement for the earlier-mentioned parachute rig proclaimed that the $40 outfit was "ready to jump." And a prominent, black-and-white photograph showed the two pistols resting in a velvet-lined case.

One advertiser ran afoul of what appeared to be a revenge-bent student taking his lumps in a freshman English course. The victim's ad included the misspelled words "cheverlets" and "tyres" and both were circled and had an "sp" drawn beside them.

Another collegiate businessman offered to trade James Bond novels, even, for books of trading stamps and still another advertised a massive collection of old Playboy magazines.

A couple of enterprising ladies asked these questions in their separate ads: "Need curtains for your dorm room?" and "Need a quiet room to study in?"

Of course there was a whole host of other items advertised, including a pair of Italian-made ski boots, massager and bicycle loaded with extras.

But the bayonet ad remains the most intriguing of the lot. It read: "Bayonet for sale — Never used — Many uses around the home."

10 Merit Awards Available For Junior College Students

Ten merit award scholarships are available for junior college graduates to attend Texas A&M.

The scholarship provides $150 support for each of four semesters, renewable by semester if the holder maintains a 2.0 grade point ratio, said Robert M. Logan.

"We wish to recognize outstanding junior college students and encourage them to continue their education at Texas A&M," the student aid director commented.

Sixty thousand students were enrolled in 51 junior colleges in Texas in 1964-65, when A&M had 710 junior college transfers.

Scholarships will be awarded strictly on scholastic achievement, Logan stated. However, financial need will be used to determine scholarship winners among several students with equal academic records.

Funds for the ten $600 scholarships are available through gifts to the A&M Development Fund.

Applications may be obtained from deans of students and must be filed no later than June 15. Awards will be announced by June 30.

SINGING DUET

Marie and Molly O'Shaugnessy of the University of Texas will sing in the Intercollegiate Talent Show Saturday night. They also do Irish dances. Their act will be one of 12 featured at G. Rollie White Coliseum. The show starts at 6:30 p. m. Tickets are available at the Memorial Student Center Program Office and at Bryan-College Station banks.
