Prof Named Editor Of Climatology Volume

John Griffiths has been named an editor for "World Survey of Climatology," an encyclopedia to be published in 12 volumes.

The associate professor of meteorology has been assigned Africa by editor-in-chief Dr. H. Landsberg, chief climatologist of the U. S. Weather Bureau.

Griffiths noted Africa will be treated in one complete volume although it is the second largest continent in the world. A complete volume will deal with the climates of the Soviet Union with another devoted to the rest of Asia.

"This will be the most comprehensive encyclopedia of its kind," Griffiths commented. In collecting and editing articles for the 300-page African volume, the London-educated meteorologist estimated he will be dealing with about a quarter-million words.

The A&M professor spent 12 years in Ethiopia, Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, the Rhodesias and South Africa. He received his B.S. degree at Kings College of London in 1947 and the masters degree at Imperial College in 1949.

The London-born scientist has published a number of papers and books.

Phi Lambda Upsilon Initiation Slated

Twelve graduate students and three undergraduates will be honored as new members of Phi Lambda Upsilon at a banquet April 16.

John B. Beckham, assistant dean of science, said A&M's Beta Beta Chapter of the honorary chemistry fraternity initiated the new members March 1. A. D. H. Clague, chapter president, conducted the ceremony.

Speaker for the April 16 banquet will be College of Science Dean Clarence Zener. Officers for 1966-67 will be installed.

Phi Lambda Upsilon membership honors students who evidence high scholarship and potential for original research.

Among the 15 initiates are Hassan A. Al Naji, William R. Clayton, Dennis Dowling, Lionel Edmonson, Jon Eikenberry, Billy Don Faubion, Claude W. Hayes, Mohan V. Kudchadker, William D. Langley, Mohammed Abu Naser, James Carrol Franks and Edwin Warwas.

Undergraduates initiated were Ronald McDaniel, Randolph Ruedrich and William E. Groce.

Research Scientist Visits This Week

A senior scientist from the National Center for Atmospheric Research at Boulder, Colo., is visiting Texas A&M this week.

Dr. Akira Kasahara will present a series of three seminars during his visit through Friday at the Department of Meteorology.

"Numerical Solutions of Shallow Water Flows over an Obstacle" is his Wednesday topic and Thursday he will speak on "Influence of Compensating Downward Motions on Development of Cumulus Clouds."

The seminars begin at 3 p.m. in Room 305 of Goodwin Hall.

Johnny Cash Fined In Narcotics Case

EL PASO (AP) — Singer Johnny Cash was fined $1,000 and given a 30-day suspended jail sentence Tuesday on a charge of possessing illegal drugs.

Cash pleaded guilty in U. S. District Court after his arrest Oct. 4 as he was leaving El Paso's airport.

Officers said Cash had 668 dexedrine tablets and 475 equanil tablets, which he said he obtained in Juarez.

Water Association Schedules Banquet

Nine awards for state water and wastewater plants will be presented Wednesday at the annual banquet of the Texas Water and Sewage Works Association's 48th Short School at Texas A&M.

Honor Roll awards in five population categories will be presented by Dr. J. E. Peavy, Commissioner of Health of the Texas State Department of Health. Awards are sponsored by the department.

The principal banquet address, "Public Relations — A Must," will be made by Lee D. Herring, vice president of the Grand Prairie State Bank.

School registration increased 20 per cent over previous years Monday. The two-division school, usually attended by about 800 water and sewage superintendents and operators, had signed an additional 255. Registration began Sunday.

Instruction involving 181 speakers, certification examinations and election of 1966 officers will keep school participants busy the remainder of the week.

G. R. Herzig Jr., state sanitary engineer and association secretary, noted A&M is a vital link in certification of water and sewage plant operators.

"A&M is a top-level partner in training, through its Civil Engineering Department, the School of Engineering and the Engineering Extension Service," Herzig said. "The Health Department, A&M and various agencies work together to improve technical know-how."

Examinations will be given to about 100 applicants Wednesday and Friday, said Sam Warrington, chief engineer of the Operators Advisory Programs.

The Texas Water Pollution Control Association's business dinner highlighted Tuesday activity. Speakers were Arthur D. Caster, vice president of the Water Pollution Control Federation of Cincinnati, and Gordon E. McCallum, presidential assistant of Infilco in Tucson. The recently retired head of the federal water control program discussed "Recent Federal Water Pollution Control Legislation."

Ray Faust, executive secretary of the American Waterworks Association, replaced AWA vice president Leo Louis as speaker at a Wednesday morning general session.
