Disappointment, Rejuvenation

The past weekend was one of disappointment and rejuvenation for Texas Aggie athletes.

Disappointments happened at: Kyle Field, where the Aggie baseballers needed to win a two-game series with Baylor to stay in title contention but had to settle for a split and virtual elimination from the Southwest Conference race.

Austin, where three Aggies had a chance to take SWC titles in golf and tennis, but had to struggle to gain seconds.

Rejuvenation happened at: Des Moines, Iowa, site of the Drake Relays, where Randy Matson regained his old form and won both the discus and shot put with excellent performances.

It will now take a miracle for the Aggies, once the No. 2 team in the nation, to win the SWC baseball title and a spot in the NCAA Tournament.

The Aggies, now 7-5 in conference play, will have to wait until the outcome of the Texas Christian-University of Texas series before they will know if the SWC title is out of reach or if they still have a chance.

TCU and Texas will play this week and if Texas beats TCU in the two-game series then the Aggies are still alive, but . . .

In the Baylor series, the Bears rallied for three runs in the ninth inning of the first game to beat the Cadets, 12-9, but A&M came back in the second game, 7-5.

A&M took a three-run lead in the initial inning of the first game only to see Baylor explode for five runs in the third to take the lead. The Aggies rallied for three and two runs in the fifth and sixth, respectively, before Baylor tied the count in the seventh and scored the winning runs in the last frame.

Alan Koonce paced the Aggie attack in the first game with two home runs, one a tape measure job in the third.

In the second game, Billy Johnson got revenge for the treatment the Bears gave him during the first game. Johnson, who started the first game, left the game after the Bears had bombed him for the five runs in the third. But in the second game, Johnson relieved starter Steve Hillhouse and put out the Bears to preserve the victory.

Lou Camilli's single, Lance Cobb's double, Rick Schwartz's double and Joe Staples' single gave the Aggies three runs in the sixth inning of the second game and the margin of victory.

For the Aggie baseballers, it will take help from their friends at the forty acres or the SWC title is out of the question.

One member of the forty-acre squad was not too friendly this past weekend. Mason Adkins fired closing rounds of 73 and 74 to beat Aggie Lee McDowell in the SWC golf championship. McDowell finished one stroke behind Adkins who fired a 295.

McDowell said after the final round he would file a written protest to the conference because of what he considered an unfair drop given Adkins on the next to the last hole, which Adkins birdied to win the match.

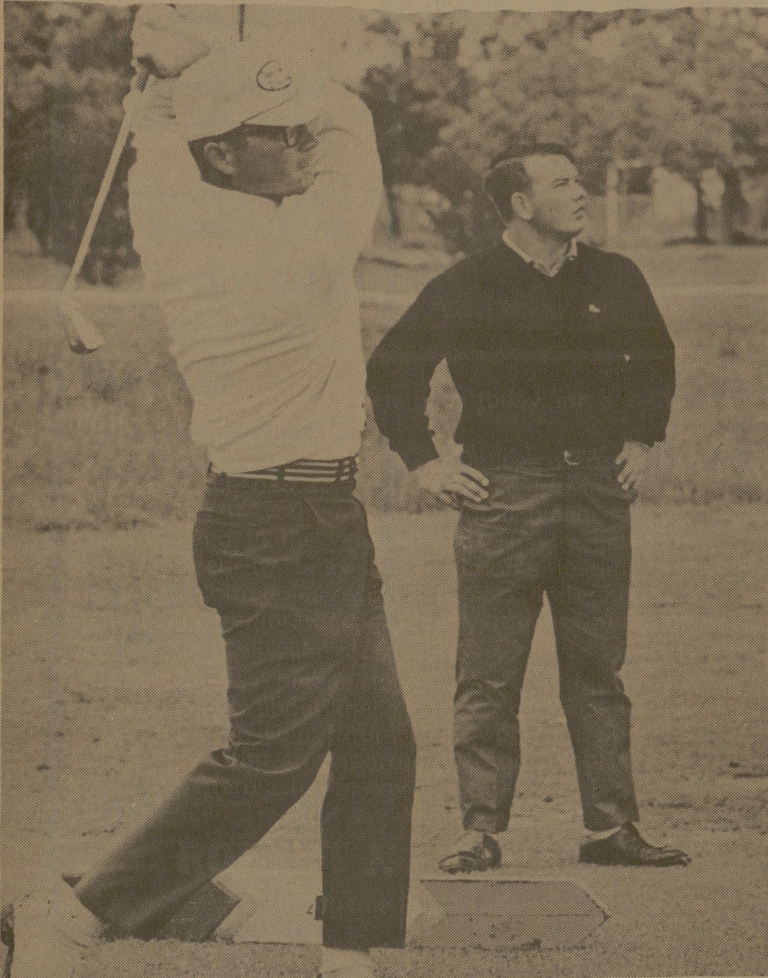

While McDowell was fighting a bad round and meet officials, Aggie netters Richard Barker and Luis Rojas couldn't solve the combination of Rice's Butch Seewagen and Chip Travis. Rojas and Barker had won the title in 1964 and were trying to get their second trophy in three years, but the Rice duo had other ideas.

Barker and Rojas, both also playing in the single tournament, were eliminated before the finals.

While Aggie athletes were trying to stay alive in Texas, Randy Matson was reborn in the middle of the nation's corn belt. The Aggie giant, who has been fighting knee injuries, lack of weight and fatigue all season, put together one of the nation's top "weight doubles" of the year.

Matson flung the discus 185-6 1/2 and putted the shot 65-3 1/2 to break his own record.

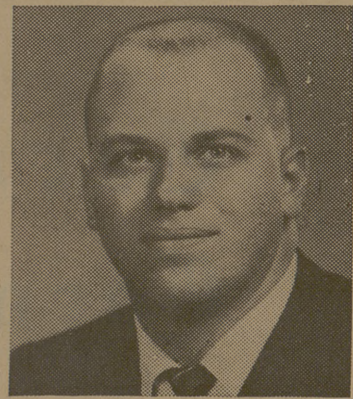

A&M also had a fourth in the 440 relay, but were disqualified for running out of the lane. The team members were Gilbert Smith, Billy Schmidt, Arnie Britt and Gary Abernathy.

GOLF PROS DISPLAY FORM

Texas Aggie graduates Bobby Nichols, top, and Billy Martindale, now on the professional golf tour, fired even-par 70s on the A&M course Monday to start the Texas A&M International Golf Tournament. Entrants in the tournament will try to beat the pros' score and have until May 23 to submit their entry. Nichols and Martindale had a bogey and birdie each in the 18-hole round played in the waterlogged course, which was drenched by heavy rains Sunday. Nichols had a bogey on the 12th hole and got his birdie on the 18th. Martindale birdied the seventh and took a bogey on the 10th. Scores of the other golfers playing with the pros were Lee McDowell, Aggie golfer, 70; Travis Bryan Jr., Bryan banker, 72; Fred Marberry, Bryan Municipal course pro and Henry Ransom, A&M coach, 77s; Gene Stallings, A&M head football coach, 88; and Jack Crichton, Dallas oil firm president, 89.
