Architecture School Sets Exhibit Displays

Working prototypes of new hospital rooms will be exhibited Aug. 22 at Texas A&M's School of Architecture.

James R. Patterson, project director of a three-year research program in A&M's Research and Graduate Center, said the exhibit will be a preview of a later showing in Chicago.

Patterson and his research team has constructed prototypes after analyzing and developing single and multiple bed forms for patient-care rooms, and in groups as nursing units.

The research is supported by Public Health Service grants.

Exhibit hours Aug. 22 are 9 to 11 a.m. and 2 to 4 p.m., Patterson announced. He said Joel Novak, research consultant for the Public Health Service in Washington, will review the work.

The exhibit will be seen by an estimated 30,000 persons attending the 68th American Hospital Association convention Aug. 29-Sept. 1, in Chicago. A&M will have the only university exhibit at the convention.

Accompanying Patterson to Chicago will be Architecture Chariman Edward Romieniec, and graduate students Michael Greer and Russell Stogsdill of Fort Worth, Douglas Ogilvie of San Antonio, Dan Malcolm of Canadian, and Frank Still of Temple.

A&M Professor Edits 2 Articles

Research instruments for measuring attitudes toward school buses and guidance programs are described by Texas A&M professor Donald G. Barker in summer editions of two journals.

"Measurement of Attitudes Toward Riding the School Bus" appeared in the July issue of Psychology in the schools, a quarterly journal of research opinion and practice.

"Development of a Scale of Attitudes Toward School Guidance" was printed in the monthly publication of the American Personnel and Guidance Association, the Personnel and Guidance Journal.

Barker, associate professor of education and psychology, specializes in attitude measurement. His article on bus riding attitudes was supported by A&M's Fund for Organized Research. Both publications were through cooperation of several Texas public schools.

Carter Gets Scholarship

Gregory S. Carter of San Antonio has been named recipient of a Chevron Oil Company scholarship from the firm's California Division to the Texas A&M Department of Civil Engineering.

Carter, senior civil engineering major with a 2.33 grade point ratio, was selected for the $500 award by the department's scholarship committee and okayed by chief engineer at Chevron.

A $1,000 grant was made, the other $500 going to the department.

"The department portion will be utilized in a teaching improvement fund and assisting research projects," announced Dr. Charles H. Samson Jr., head.

"We wish to promote desirable contacts between this company and the university with the ultimate view of placing a number of its graduates in our organization each year," disclosed G. K. Carr of Chevron's personnel department. Several Chevron officials are A&M graduates.

Carter is a distinguished student, member of Chi Epsilon, Phi Eta Sigma and the YMCA's Polaris Council. The son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. C. G. Carter, 902 Mount Whitney, Stead AFB, Nev., will be commanding officer of Squadron 7 in the Cadet Corps next fall. He was graduated from Alamo Heights High School in San Antonio.

3 Task Forces Set Meetings

Three task forces of the group studying Texas agriculture have scheduled meetings this month.

Kenneth Wolf, Extension agribusiness specialist at Texas A&M and coordinator of the study, said meeting dates and places are being announced to allow persons on one task force, a chance to attend general meetings of the other task forces.

The natural resource conservation task force will meet at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Memorial Student Center.

The task force on crops will meet at 10 a.m. Wednesday also in the MSC.

The human resources task force will meet at 9 a.m. Aug. 20 at the Villa Capri Hotel and Convention Center in Austin.

Wolf said all task forces have been "digging into" the comprehensive study of Texas agriculture. The study was requested by the Texas A&M board of directors.

There are five task forces in all. The two not meeting as a group in August are the livestock, poultry and animal products and supplying, processing, and distributing industries task forces.

Noted Horsemen To Judge Show

Two well known Southwestern horsemen will judge the 1966 Texas 4-H Horse Show in San Antonio on Friday and Saturday, according to B. F. Yeates, Extension horse specialist at Texas A&M.

They are Jack H. Bates of Albuquerque, N. M., and John Trimmier Jr., of Hale Center. The horse show will get underway at Joe Freeman Coliseum at 7 a.m., Friday and continue through Saturday night.

Bates, a professional horseman for 18 years, has wide experience in teaching boys and girls as well as in training horses and judging shows. In recent years, he has developed 50 youngsters into state champions and currently has some 50 students enrolled in his horse equitation and horsemanship school.

Trimmier is known widely for his accomplishments as a horse breeder and as a showman. He has trained many champions including the top all-round horse of the Golden Spread Quarter Horse Association in 1965, and the 4th place cutting horse in NCHA competition in 1964. Trimmier also has served many years as a 4-H adult leader in Hale County.

Ag Footballers To Represent A&M At Rally

Three senior linemen — center Jim Singleton and guards Gary Kovar and Don Koehn — will represent the Texas Aggies at the Southwest Conference Football Rally in Fort Worth Aug. 18.

The trio is expected to comprise the center of A&M's offensive line next fall. At the close of spring drills they emerged as offensive starters.

Kovar, from Houston Jones, and Koehn, from Brenham, are two-year lettermen. Singleton won his first letter last season but joined the other two as starters on Coach Gene Stallings' first Aggie edition. He is from San Antonio Alamo Heights.

None of the three is large by current collegiate standards. Koehn is the heaviest at 215 while Singleton is the lightest at 196. Kovar is sandwiched between at 208.

The annual rally, sponsored by the Greater Fort Worth Sports Committee, is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the Texas Hotel. All eight SWC schools are represented by three players each.
