

Education To Award First Ph.D.

The first Ph.D. in education at Texas A&M will be awarded today to Dr. Kamel Moghrabi of Jordan.

The 34-year-old educator enrolled at A&M in September, 1964. He received preliminary degrees at Marquette University in 1961 and Bradley University in 1963, also studying at Louisiana State and Georgia Universities.

An experienced teacher in Jordan, Moghrabi plans to teach in the United States a year before returning to the Southwest Asian country to pursue his career.

He was born in Jaffa, Palestine. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mohammed U. Moghrabi reside in Atara of the Ramallah district.

The English, Arabic, Russian and German-speaking A&M graduate's dissertation is titled "An Analysis of Factors That Influence the Degree of Success or Failure of Foreign Students at Texas A&M."

"Dr. Moghrabi's research will be useful to A&M and other universities with international students," commented Dr. Paul Hensarling, Department of Education and Psychology head.

The summer graduate's work in the new interdisciplinary Ph.D. program, requiring at least half of material covered to be outside the education area, was strong in social sciences, noted Dr. Donald A. Barker, education professor. Moghrabi's supporting work was in economics and management, Barker said.

"He is considered a leader by other international students," Barker added, "and is very outgoing and friendly."

Moghrabi taught algebra at A&M as a graduate student instructor. He also had experience as a Jordanian teacher, instructing all subjects in the upper elementary grades.

Active in student affairs, Moghrabi is presently in Milwaukee to look into a year of teaching in the U. S. He will receive the Ph.D. in absentia.

Alsmeyer Joins Cushing Staff

Henry L. Alsmeyer Jr. has been named assistant reference librarian at Texas A&M's Cushing Library, announced assistant library director John C. Smith.

Alsmeyer, 39, returns to A&M after a year's leave of absence to study for an M.S. in library science at Louisiana State.

Prior to his graduate studies, Alsmeyer wrote three years for university information.

The Robstown native attended A&M, graduated with a journalism degree from the University of Texas in 1948, and acquired a masters degree in English at Texas A&I.

Alsmeyer had 14 years newspaper and college public relations experience. He directed public relations at Maryville College, Tenn., and Presbyterian Pan American. The librarian was managing editor of the Kingsville Record and a staff member of the Corpus Christi Caller Times.

Indian Movie Set Saturday

The Texas A&M India Association will present an Indian movie at 7 p.m. Saturday.

"Ghunghat," which will be with English sub-titles, will be presented in the Chemistry Lecture Room.
