

Deer Surveys Affect Length Of Season

The 1966 deer hunting season, beginning Nov. 12, could be seriously affected by surveys that were taken as long as five years ago.

Sam Reeves, a sophomore wildlife science major here, found these facts and others to be true as he worked as an assistant field biologist for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department this summer.

Reeves, stationed in Silsbee but traveling throughout the East Texas Piney Woods area, had the responsibility of gathering information on deer population dynamics in the field.

"What I really did, however, was learn how to count deer," he said.

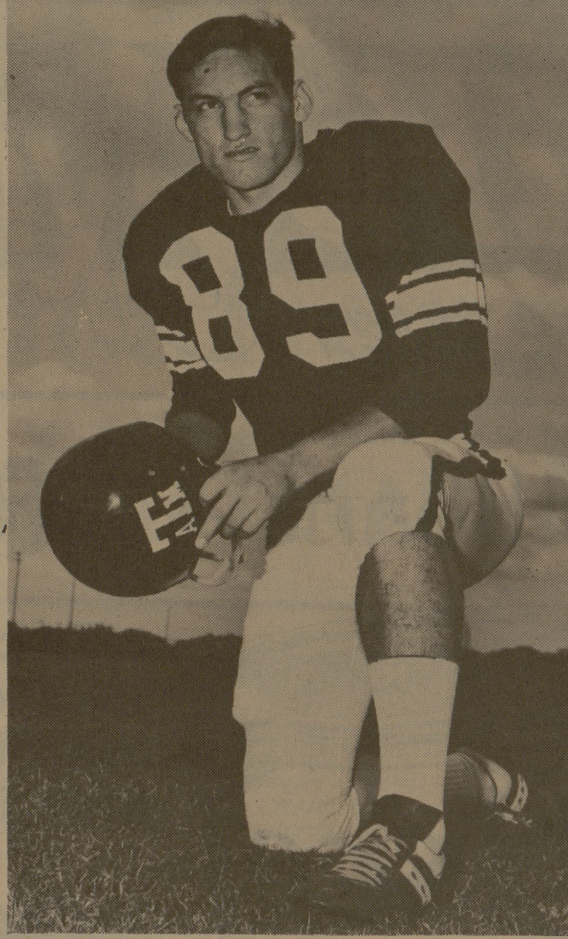

"We had several methods of counting the deer in different areas," Reeves said, "but there were three that we used the most: sight records, cruise lines and track counts.

"Sight records were fairly simple. You waited until late in the evening, then rode through the woods and counted the deer you saw in a certain measured area.

"On a cruise line, you walked about two miles straight through the woods, one hour before sundown. The strip was in a straight fairway that had been cleared previously. As you walked you made a sight count of the deer you saw on or near the fairway.

"The third method, track counting, sometimes got to be quite monotonous. The procedure followed was to clear a three-foot wide strip, six miles long to a county. We would then clean the strip by dropping brush behind a jeep. When we came back to the place the next morning, we would count the sets of tracks that had violated our pathway.

"By comparing the figures totaled from this summer's survey with those from previous years, wildlife biologists can predict whether or not it would be beneficial to raise or lower the bag limit and season length in certain areas of Texas."

GRADY ALLEN
... Aggies' defensive end.

Allen Plays Finest Game Against Tech

Grady Allen, Texas A&M defensive end, played his finest ball game of the season last Saturday night as the Texas Aggies threw a new threat into the Southwest Conference, downing the Texas Tech Red Raiders, 35-14.

The Aggie letterman was credited with six tackles and three assists during the night as he halted Tech sweeps and downed Raider passers for minus yardage. Once his jarring tackle forced a Tech fumble that the Aggies recovered.

Allen didn't feel that he and his teammate performed any impossible feat with the victory. "It showed just what we really could do. Our defense came around and the offense didn't seem to do much wrong."

"A win always helps. The first win makes things a little better," Allen said.

Things are a lot better at Aggieland now. A&M looked like a different team Saturday. Not the same squad that lost its first two games in the second half on mistakes.

Saturday night when the Aggies meet the LSU Tigers in Baton Rouge, La., defenders like the 200-pound Allen will again play a big part for A&M.

Allen, just a junior this year with one year of varsity experience, again is a regular. Last year Coach Gene Stallings said at a press conference that Allen was probably the most under-rated man on his team. An unknown player that nobody noticed. But that's all changed now. Aggie opponents know about Allen and his determined play at the right defensive end post.

The 6-3 Allen came to A&M from Nacogdoches where he was captain of his high school team and all-district offensive end. He played linebacker on defense.

He had plenty of ability and talent when he came to A&M but Allen feels that Stallings has really improved him. "I really like playing for him. He teaches sound football. Sound football that will be paying off soon for A&M."

Athletic Dinner Ducats Now Available For $5

Tickets for the Texas A&M Athletic Hall of Fame luncheon on Oct. 29 are now on sale at the Athletic Director's office in G. Rollie White Coliseum for $5 each.

Three football greats — two players and a coach — and a track olympian will be inducted into the Hall of Fame at a noon luncheon before the Aggies tangle with the Arkansas Razorbacks in a Southwest Conference game in Kyle Field.

The inductees are Dana X. Bible, Joe M. Boyd, Dick Todd and Arthur H. (Art) Harnden.
