DR. OWEN FENNEMA

Wisconsin Prof To Speak Here

Dr. Owen Fennema, associate professor of food science at the University of Wisconsin, will speak Friday at Texas A&M University.

Sponsors of Dr. Fennema's visit are the Graduate College and the Society of Sigma Xi.

Subject of Dr. Fennema's presentation is "Ice and Icelike Structures in Biological Systems." The talk is scheduled for 4 p. m. in Rooms 113-114 of the Heep Building.

Dr. Fennema has worked in research and teaching at Wisconsin. His major scientific interests are low temperature food preservation and clathrate compounds, particularly the physical chemical aspects.

The graduate lecturer earned his B.S. in agriculture at Kansas State University, M.S. in dairy science and Ph.D. in food science and biochemistry at Wisconsin. He served two years with the U. S. Army and was associated with the Pillsbury Company from 1953 to 1957.

Turkey Industry Sets Day Here

The annual Turkey Industry Day meeting is scheduled for Nov. 3, according to Ben C. Wormeli, extension poultry specialist at A&M.

The meeting will be in the ballroom of the Memorial Student Center. The Poultry Science Department, with the cooperation of the Texas Turkey Federation, has prepared a program that is intended to be of interest to turkey producers, processors, hatcherymen, suppliers, servicemen and all others concerned with a successful turkey industry in Texas.

REGISTRATION WILL BE AT 8:15 a. m. in the Serpentine Lounge of the MSC. Presiding over the morning session will be Hardy Barnett, president of the Texas Turkey Federation.

Speakers and their topics for the session are: Ben C. Wormeli, extension poultry specialist, on Texas Turkey Situation; Manning A. Price, associate professor of entomology, on Progress Report on Turkey Chigger Control; Donald E. Farris, from the Department of Economics and Sociology, on Report of the National Commission on Food Marketing.

Dr. John H. Quisenberry, head of the Department of Poultry Science, on Genetic Objectives for Turkey Performance; Dr. Robert L. Atkinson, on Blackhead - Drugs and Turkey Growth; and Hardy Barnett, President Texas Poultry Federation, on Progress of the Texas Turkey Federation and Texas Poultry Federation.

THE AFTERNOON SESSION will be presided over by David D. Ozment, executive secretary of the Texas Turkey Federation. Speakers for the afternoon session and the topics of their speeches are:

Dr. W. F. Krueger, professor of poultry science, on Factors that Minimize Poultry Cost the Year Around; Warren Miller from the Quaker Oats Company of Fredericksburg, on Tending Turkeys to eight weeks; Leonard R. Sullivan of Waxahachie, on Tending Turkeys eight Weeks to Market; Kenneth A. Engelbrecht of Crawford, on Tending Turkey Breeders; Kirklyn M. Kerr of the Department of Veterinary Pathology, on Snyovitis - Cause and Control; and Robert L. Kilgore of Fayetteville, Arkansas, on Fowl Cholera - Cause and Control.

Herbicide Expert Keynotes Meeting

Successful chemical vegetation control industries should develop sound scientific knowledge, good business judgment and better ways for herbicides to serve others, an expert said Monday at Texas A&M University.

John A. Mobley III, a Kilgore contracting service owner, made the recommendations in his keynote address to 75 men attending the opening session of a two-day industrial weed control conference.

The former Texas legislator and A&M graduate said a more compact society is demanding more order and better housekeeping, adding impetus to the industrial weed control industry.

"WE ARE BREAKING new ground in the industry," Mobley remarked. "There is lack of information and standards as well as a lack of real knowledge on the part of the buyer about herbicides."

"Chemical application is the best, most efficient and cheapest way to control weeds," he added. "I hope we can develop specifications in buying procedures during this first annual conference." Mobley cited Lady Bird Johnson for helping promote housekeeping in America. He said railroads are the biggest users of herbicides in controlling weed problems along right of way. Oil and gas industries rank second, he said, with power transmission and distributors third.

DR. R. E. PATTERSON, A&M dean of agriculture and Texas Agricultural Experiment Station director, spoke briefly in the morning session.

Conference Director Dr. Wayne G. McCully predicted registration would pass the 100 mark before a 7 p. m. Monday dinner at the Ramada Inn.

Guest speaker for the dinner is Dr. John B. Orr, A&M Philosophy and Humanities Department head. C. J. Keese, executive officer of the Texas Transportation Institute at A&M, will preside.

Tuesday speakers include Dr. Jack D. Price, agricultural chemicals extension leader for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, and Stanley K. Lehman, A&M Range Science Department.

GROUP DISCUSSIONS on maintenance problems also are scheduled Tuesday. The conference ends at noon.

Panel discussions Monday

Shmoldas Named To Fill Vacancy

Chester Shmoldas of Crockett has been selected the Agricultural Economics Club representative to the Student Agricultural Council of Texas A&M University.

Shmoldas, an agricultural economics major, was elected at the organization's second fall semester meeting to fill a vacancy due to a non-returning student.

The other officers were selected last spring.

They are president, Paul Tate of Waxahachie; first vice president, Aubrey Davis of Hubbard; second vice president, Ronnie Engelbrecht of Crawford; third vice president, Bill Schott of Silverton; treasurer, Jerry Kazda of Abbott; secretary, Johnny Moores of Texarkana; parliamentarian, Al Allen of Carrizo Springs; and reporter, Lawrence Sommers of Temple.

Every technical club at A&M is represented on the Council.

A&M Gets $15,000 Humble Grant

A five-facet Humble Oil Education Foundation grant of $15,000 was presented Friday to Texas A&M President Earl Rudder by John S. Bell, manager of Humble's East Texas Production Division.

Allocated to four A&M schools and institutes, the grant will support educational programs in accounting, geology, petroleum, chemical, mechanical and electrical engineering departments. The grant is broken down through Schools of Business ($3,000), Engineering ($9,000) and Geosciences ($2,500) and the Texas Transportation Institute ($500).

Accompanying Bell for the presentation were O. F. Zedler, supervising engineer, and A. Ben Rommel, public relations department. The Humble officials are from Houston.

"We are most grateful to Humble for this support," Rudder said. Attending the presentation were Academic Affairs Dean Wayne C. Hall, Business School Dean John Pearson, Engineering Dean Fred Benson, Geosciences Dean Horace Byers and Dr. Charles Wooten of TTI.
