Basketeers Preparing For La. Tech

By GARY SHERER

The 1966-67 edition of the Texas A&M varsity basketball team goes into action Thursday night against tall Louisiana Tech.

Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf sends his 10-man squad into the fray with the possibility of starting three sophomores. The Aggie mentor lists Ronnie Peret from Plainview, Billy Bob Barnett from Brenham and Sonny Benefield from Sweeny as the possible soph starters.

At this time, they are battling with captain Dick Rector from Dumas, the only senior on the squad, junior Terry Trippett of Odessa, junior John Underwood from Honey Grove and Jerry Payne, a junior from Sterling City, for the starting call.

Coach Metcalf revealed that the Aggies will be at a height disadvantage in the opening game with the visitors from Ruston, La. Tech Coach Scotty Robertson lists three sky-scrapers on his roster. The giants include 7'0" Charles Bishop (pictured at right), 6'11" Richard Peek and "little" Tommy Gregory, who measures a scant 6'6".

The 8 p.m. encounter will follow the Fish basketball team's first game of the year, with Lon Morris Junior College at 5:45 p.m. Coach Jim Culpepper has a promising group of netmen this year and the team has been impressive in several scrimmages with the varsity.

Fish games this year will precede all varsity games, both home and away.

VISITING SKYSCRAPER

Among the nation's tallest collegiate basketballers this season is Charlie Bishop, seven-foot freshman center for the Louisiana Tech Bulldogs, who open their season Thursday night against the Aggies at G. Rollie White Coliseum. The towering kid from Summerfield, La., averaged 31.2 points a game through four high school seasons and was named to the All-America prep team. He weighs 245.
