Aggies Should Be Good Sports Too

We're embarrassed. After Tuesday's editorial regarding Southwest Conference Sportsmanship Trophy winner, Texas U., and its student misbehavior at their recent Tech basketball game, we appear to be the "pot calling the kettle black."

During Tuesday's game with the Longhorns, A&M students put on a most embarrassing performance.

Texas players were constantly heckled. The referees were booed and paper cups were thrown at them. This is not the way Aggies are expected to act.

Even though the rivalry at a t.u. ballgame is so intense that it brings near chaos, we should not forget that it is our responsibility to conduct ourselves in a sportsman-like manner.

Most Aggies don't realize what the Sportsmanship Trophy means, simply because it has been so long since A&M has won it. To be a good sport in both victory and defeat is a virtue that seems to be losing its place in today's world.

The Aggies may have won the game on the court, but we lost in the stands due to those who have forgotten that while being an Aggie, they must also be good sports.

Official Says Best Public Relations Is Good Product, Satisfied Customer

By MARK McNEEL
"The best public relations a company can have is a good product and a satisfied customer," said David A. Crellin, Ford Motor Company public relations field office manager in Dallas.

Crellin spoke here Wednesday to Dr. David R. Bower's public relations class and Jack D. Bogan's advertising class.

"At Ford we think public relations is everybody's job," Crellin explained, "from Henry Ford to the plant employee."

Crellin has been field office manager in Dallas for more than two years and made his third appearance here Wednesday. He attended Michigan State University and Wayne State University in Detroit. Then worked for a Detroit newspaper before beginning work at Ford 16 years ago.

Crellin started as a writer at Ford, worked in Lincoln-Mercury sales, and then entered public relations. He observed that 95 per cent of the persons he knows in public relations have writing backgrounds, but that the present trend is toward entrance into the field of more business trained personnel.

Post Office Jobs Offered Students By Civil Service

By CHARLES ROWTON
Students who want government jobs this summer can qualify as seasonal assistants in United States Post Offices, according to recent announcement from the United States Civil Service Commission.

Requirements for these positions are passing a one-hour written test, driving ability in some cases, and being 18 years old. High school graduates over 16 may also apply. Applicants who passed the Examination for Post Office Summer Jobs for 1966 do not need to take the test again.

The Post Office Department hires seasonal assistants for temporary employment during the summer to assist their permanent employees. They are also hired to assist with the Christmas rush and other busy times. The jobs may be part-time or full-time, depending on the needs of the individual post office.

W. S. EDMONDS, superintendent of the post office station at the Memorial Student Center, said that most of the jobs involved separating mail or other basic work that anyone could do. Some of the positions do require the operation of post office vehicles. Renumeration is at the rate of $2.44 an hour for the job which is rated at level PFS-3 under the Civil Service system of rating.

Texas College Board Awards $75,000 Grant

Two matching grants totaling almost $75,000 for institutional research projects have been awarded Texas A&M by the Texas College Coordinating Board.

Dr. Frank W. R. Hubert, dean of A&M's Liberal Arts College, made the announcement. He is principal investigator for both projects.

One of the programs involves application of scientific management practices in academic administration and is financed by a $37,2172 matching grant.

Dr. Hubert said an intensive two-week training seminar in college and university administration practices will be held this summer. One week of the seminar is scheduled at A&M, the other tentatively set for Trinity University in San Antonio.

A maximum 40 participants from colleges and universities in the Southwest, primarily Texas, will participate in the seminar, Hubert noted. The Association of Texas Colleges and Universities will collaborate in the seminar.

Jack W. Humphries, assistant Liberal Arts dean, is associate investigator. Two doctoral level graduate students and a senior secretary will assist.

A second project, supported by funds totaling $37,370, provides for design of a model set of criteria in evaluating proposed new courses at state colleges and universities.

Ernest Gregg, postmaster for College Station, said that present plans did not call for the hiring of anyone in the College Station area under this program. He said that the post office had hired students under the Youth Opportunities Program in the past.

Mrs. Gladys Bishop, Placement Office secretary, said that all forms necessary to apply for these positions are available at the Placement Office or either one of the post offices. Form 5000AB should be completed and mailed to the Executive Director, Establishment Board of United States Civil Service Commission Examiner, United States Post Office, Dallas, Texas 75221.

FORM AN 2300 is needed to select the city, state, and code number of the place where one wants to take the written test. The code number for the Bryan-College Station area is 42-11; while the code number for Houston 42-27.

The written test will be given on Feb. 25 and March 4. All applications must be postmarked on or before Feb. 9.

Agriculture students who want to work for the government this summer can qualify for jobs as farm management supervisor trainees.

A large number of people in the field of agriculture would be wise to take advantage of this opportunity, advised Mrs. Gladys Bishop of the Placement Office. These jobs give students a very good opportunity to gain information and experience in their field of interest.

STUDENTS WHO qualify for employment spend the summer in a county office of the Farmers Home Administration. These trainees help farm families in the general management of their farming operations.

The jobs have two different Civil Service ratings. Students with 30 semester hours can qualify for a GS-3 rating with pay of $82 per week, while those with at least two and one-half years of study can be classified as a GS-4 with pay of $92 per week.

To qualify for these jobs, one must first pass a written examination. This test checks verbal abilities, abstract reasoning, and graph and table interpretations. Those who have already taken the test do not need to take it again to be eligible for a position.

FURTHER INFORMATION on these jobs may be obtained from the Placement Office. To register for the test, one should go by the Placement Office and fill out Form 5000 AB. This form should be completed and sent to the Farmers Home Administration before Feb. 28 for the April 8 test.

A representative of the Farmers Home Administration will be conducting interviews in the Placement Office on Feb. 14-15. Anyone who would like to know more about the program can talk with this representative when he is here.
