

500 Attending Sewage School At A&M

More than 500 participants registered this week for the opening day of the 49th Texas Water and Sewage Works Association Short School at Texas A&M.

W. J. Weems of Abilene, president of the 4,500-member association, predicted a record 900 registrants before the school ends Friday.

The old attendance mark of 846 was set last year. A&M Engineering Dean Fred J. Benson, speaking in the first general session, said the organization faces one of the state's biggest problems in combating water pollution. Benson noted the short school has been meeting more than 40 years at Aggieland.

Dr. M. T. Garrett Jr. of Houston, president of the Texas Water Pollution Control Association, also spoke briefly. CLASSES related to water and sewage control subjects began after "The Murder of Silence," a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department slide presentation depicting outdoor beautification.

State Department Of Health Puts 8 Cities On Honor Roll

Eight Texas cities were named to the 1966 honor roll of the Texas State Department of Health Wednesday during a banquet at Texas A&M.

Dr. J. E. Peavy, state health commissioner, presented the awards at the 49th Texas Water and Sewage Works Association Short School.

Kemah, a city near NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, was the only double winner. First place went to Kemah for the most attractive and efficient water plant in the 8,000 and below population bracket. Kemah also took first in the wastewater plants division.

Other cities winning awards for most attractive and efficient water plants include:

Sweetwater, 20,000 and under population.

Denton, 40,000 and under population.

Odessa, 150,000 and under population.

Fort Worth, over 150,000 population.

Cities named as state winners for the most attractive and efficient waste-water plants include:

Lamesa, 20,000 and under population.

Plainview, 40,000 and under population.

Richardson, 150,000 and under population.

Bulletin Board 'Swap Shop' Has Laughs

Chuckles and advertisements are free as the air on a student swap, sale or trade board in the Academic Building.

Among cards listing cars, guitars, books, pets, household furnishings, carburetors, house trailers and phonographs are unwitting examples of humor.

"For Sale," one card proclaimed. "I'm bursted. Almost new slide rule, used very little."

The first floor bulletin board also serves as a lost-found department. One student wrote his own epitaph: "Lost by stupid me: Engineers scale and protractor in 321 Physics. Be a good Aggie and give them back. The self-incriminating placard listed no name, address or phone number.

"Is everyone getting ahead of you? Do you loose (lose?) power because of no traction? Decrease your coefficient of slip . . ."

Its advertiser wasn't selling hot-rodder's tires. He was peddling football shoes.

Col. Vernon Head, Aerospace Studies Department head, briefed members of Wings and Sabers Tuesday. The Vietnam talk was based on his observations during two assignments there.

He discussed important aspects of the country, including geography, terrain, population, ethnic groups, religions and disposition of Air Force units. Along with the discussion he presented a series of color slides of Vietnam and Thailand.

Wings and Sabers is an organization of Army and Air ROTC scholarship winners.

Head was on duty with the Force during the French evacuation of Vietnam in 1954 and during another period from July to July 1965.
