

CADET SLOUCH by Jim Earle

"Actually, it's a fake, but I haven't gotten a room inspection demerit since I hung it!"

Aggieland Enters The 'Time Zone'

The chimes at the Memorial Student Center are ringing out it's 7 o'clock, but your alarm clock says that it's only six, and that Sunday morning sun "just ain't came up yet! What's the matter?"

"Oh yeah, today's the day they go on Daylight Saving Time."

The day begins
You miss breakfast because you waited 'til the last minute to decide to go, and when you get there you find you've forgotten about the time change again and they're just closing up.

You get to church just in time to hear the last few words of the sermon because you hadn't set your watch ahead that extra hour, but that really isn't so bad, 'cause everyone else had set their watches back an hour and didn't get to church until an hour after the services were over.

At Easterwood, six people missed the same plane flight to Dallas that eight people had waited for over an hour.

"The noon news didn't come on 'til one, or was it two?"
That 2 o'clock phone call to a girlfriend back home didn't go through 'cause the girlfriend thought it was just 1 o'clock and she was still out getting a coke with that other guy.

At evening chow nearly 50 students stood outside an hour waiting for the lines to open, 'cause they'd missed breakfast and lunch and thought for sure it was 'cause they were supposed to set the clocks BACK and hour, or WAS it forward?

That favorite TV western musta come on an hour early 'cause all you got to see was the closing credits. "What's going on anyway?"
Give up and go to North Gate for a pizza? Nope, that's been closed for more than two hours.

Enter Monday morning—or is it Tuesday morning?

43 Complete Study Of Basic Industry

A five-day basic industrial development course at Texas A&M was completed today by 43 participants from Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

James R. Bradley, A&M Industrial Economics Division director, said the course was the first of its type to be offered in the United States.

"This 44-hour school was primarily for laymen, career practitioners and others concerned with industrial development programs of various dimensions," Bradley commented.

Bradley noted several schools are offered for professional or veteran industrial development specialists, but the A&M school is the first to hold formal course in basic industrial development adult education.

The Texas Industrial Development Council, the Texas Industrial Commission were co-sponsors for the school hosted by A&M.

Senator Appoints Aggie To Air Force Academy

Texas A&M sophomore Douglas M. Scott of Port Neches has received an appointment through Senator Ralph Yarborough to the Air Force Academy.

A twin who rooms with his brother David, Douglas is a cadet corporal in the White Band. "Goodbye," David remarked when the senator's telegram announcing the appointment came. "I'll take your coat, pants and other parts of the uniform that fit. And you needn't burden yourself with the rug and curtains."

Scott reports to the Colorado Springs, Colo., school June 26 and will face four years schooling at the Academy, though his 70 semester hours at A&M will be credited.

"I hope to complete a graduate degree before I graduate," the brown-haired math major said.

"I wanted to go to the Academy for two reasons," the twin added. "I'd like to make the Air Force a career, and it provides a chance to make the twin break and still stay in the military."

Doug and Dave have followed virtually identical tracks since they were at Port Neches-Groves High. Both were in the band, played basketball and came to A&M.

As freshmen last year, they were tagged "Twiddly-dee (Doug plays the flute and piccolo) and Twiddly-dum" (David plays the bass horn). In three semesters, Doug has posted an overall 2.88 grade point ratio (straight A's at A&M are 3.0). His brother has collected three more grade points, for a 2.9 GPR. Both are mathematics majors.

The brothers were counselors at a YMCA camp at Estes Park, Colo., and both are fanatical golfers. Doug shoots in the low 90s, Dave in the high 80s.

"Colonel Adams (Lt. Col. E. V. Adams, A&M band director) designated us on his marching charts as fish Scott flute and fish Scott bass," Doug noted.

"Actually, we didn't look too much alike until we put on the uniform," he added, explaining that band members distinguish them by different wrist watch bands.

Doug is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honor society; the YMCA and talent committee, A&M Methodist Church Student Council and a Distinguished Student three semesters.

The twins are the sons of Mrs. Emmy Lou M. Scott, 1220 Eugene, Port Neches. They were born at West Point where their father, the late Maj. Ralph M. Scott, taught and was graduated in 1943. He served in the Air Force 11 years and settled in Port Neches in 1956.

Phi Kappa Phi Sets Initiation For 139 Juniors, Seniors

The annual initiation ceremonies of the Texas A&M Chapter of Phi Kappa Phi is set May 9 in the A&M Memorial Student Center Assembly Room.

Dr. A. B. Wooten, president of the national scholastic honor society, said 139 initiates, mostly juniors and seniors, will be inducted. The A&M Chapter has 130 members.

Dr. Wooten said junior initiates must have minimum grade point ratios of 2.5, while seniors are required to have minimum 2.25

GPRs. Graduate and faculty members must be nominated and elected by chapter members.

Speaker for the 6:30 p.m. banquet is Dr. Frank Vandiver, Master Distinguished Professor of History at Rice University. He will discuss "That Elusive Civil War."

Dr. A. M. (Tony) Sorenson, banquet committee chairman, said those who plan to attend should purchase tickets by May 2. Wives and husbands of Phi Kappa Phi members and initiates are invited.

Rodeo Association Sponsors Annual Event Here May 4-5

The Texas Aggie Rodeo Association is sponsoring its annual Aggie Rodeo May 4-6 at the Texas A&M arena.

Performances begin at 8 p.m. daily with slack runoff at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Events will include bareback and saddle bronc riding, tie-down calf roping, ribbon roping, steer wrestling, bull riding, girls' barrel racing and goat tying, and a special steer tying event exclusively for A&M Corps of Cadets members.

Henry Lee Graves, Aggie Rodeo Club secretary, said the rodeo is approved by the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA). Points awarded here will be used in selecting winners in the national finals.

Trophies will be awarded to both high point boy and girl teams. Buckles will go to individual winners in each event, best all-round boy and best all-round girl.

Contractor Frank Harris of West Columbia will furnish stock for the rodeo, Graves reported. Judges are W. M. Holt of Navasota and Bill Streater of Southwest Texas State College, San Marcos. Announcing for the event is Claude Cannon of A&M and handling the clowning duties will be Tom Glasscock also of A&M.

Teams have been invited from the entire NIRA Southern Region, and 15-20 schools are expected to be represented, Graves said.

Editor; The Battalion; Dear Sir;

Well, they're at it again, Those idiots are having another "demonstration." This makes me sick. How any one can be so stupid is beyond me.

The people in the "demonstration" don't realize that they won't accomplish anything except giving A&M a bad name which it doesn't deserve. I guess that you can't really tell how much you like a school until something like this happens to open your eyes. I never knew how much I loved this school until last night and tonight (Thursday night).

If the idiots wanted to do something about their gripes they should have gone to the polls today and elected responsible leaders to the Student Senate. I haven't participated in either "demonstration" and I am proud of it. I feel sorry for anyone that has because they don't realize what they are doing.

I agree with what they are "demonstrating" against but not the way they are going about it. Maybe I am old-fashioned but that is the way I feel.

Sincerely, Jim Grimes '70 Box 4942

Letters Printed In Yearbook

Dr. Garland Cannon, associate professor of English, is the author of an article, "The Collected Letters of Sir William Jones," which will be included in the 1966 yearbook of the American Philological Society.

Dr. Cannon said he is completing the manuscript of a two-volume definitive edition of the correspondence of Jones, a noted eighteenth century orientalist.

The edition, to be published by the Clarendon Press, Oxford, will consist of approximately 700 letters by Jones, some 400 of which are previously unpublished.

Cannon said the Jones' correspondence include such legal, political and literary figures of the eighteenth century as Pitt, Burke, Shelburne, Cornwallis, Kenyon, Garrick, Percy, Gibbon and Cartwright.

According to Cannon, the edition will make available to scholars much of the raw data from which Jones founded disciplines of comparative linguistics, comparative mythology and comparative law.

Editor; The Battalion; Dear Sir;

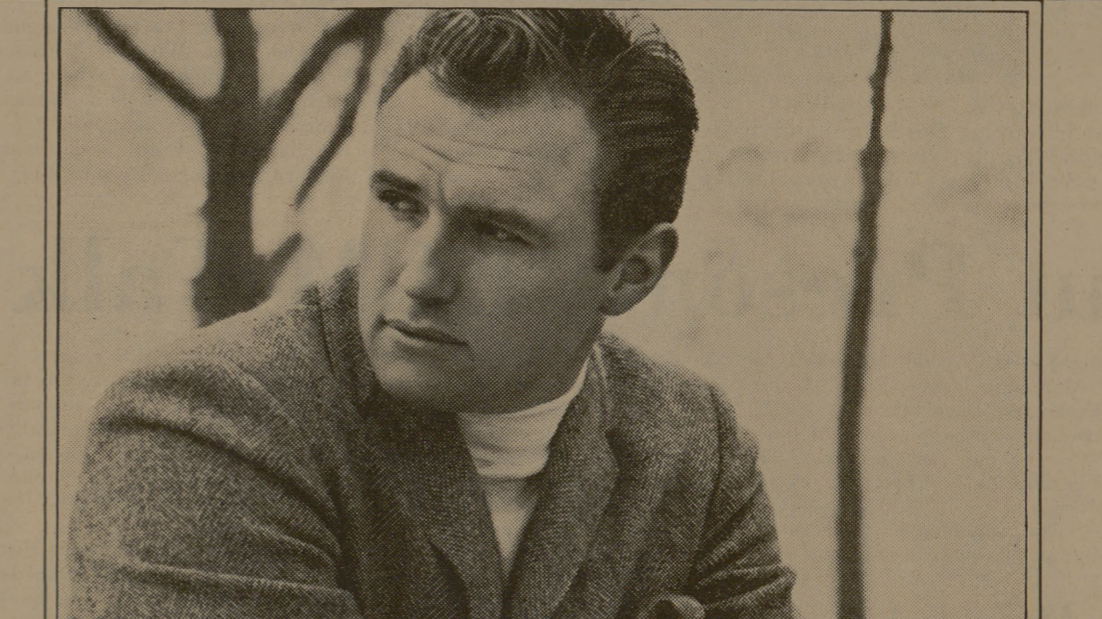

I am a sophomore, a groady non-reg, I oppose the Administration's decision to enforce compulsory board, and I am boarding off campus to avoid the Sbsisa slop. But last Wednesday's student demonstration against the Administration's decision reflects the naivety and childishness of some of my fellow non-reg. Hundreds of them paraded out to President Rudder's home carry-
