

Library Reaches 'Topping' Stage

Texas A&M officials and the Temple Associates construction superintendent, Harvey J. Thigpen, "topped out" the new $3.5 Cushing Library addition recently.

A small cedar tree was placed on the penthouse roof, 70 feet above the first floor which will be the highest point of the structure.

Attending the 3,000-year-old ceremony were President Earl Rudder; Academic Vice President Dr. Wayne C. Hall; Dr. Haskell Monroe, assistant dean of the graduate college; Dr. James Dyke, library director; Thigpen; A&M's building inspector, M. B. Akers, and Presidential assistant Ed Cooper.

The penthouse atop the four-foot structure will house works for one of three elevators and air conditioning equipment.

The topping out a blend of superstition and horseplay that is supposed to protect a new building from demons, follows that point in construction at which the edifice reaches its highest point.

LIBRARY HIGH POINT MARKED

Cushing Library construction has reached its highest elevation, a situation celebrated by a "topping out" ceremony. Attending the brief event, involving placing a small cedar tree on the 70-foot-high penthouse roof, are (from left) Texas A&M building inspector M. B. Akers, Harvey J. Thigpen, Temple Association construction superintendent; Academic Vice President Wayne C. Hall, President Earl Rudder and Dr. James Dyke, library director.

Sanders Winner Of Purina Award

James O. Sanders of Beeville, animal science major at Texas A&M, is the winner of Ralston Purina Company's Danforth Award for Agricultural College Seniors.

James received the honor in recognition of his high academic standing, activities and leadership. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Olin Sanders of Wofford Lane in Beeville.

The student will spend two weeks this summer studying business operations of Purina Company headquarters in St. Louis, Mo. He will spend another two weeks at the American Youth Foundation Camp in Michigan where he will broaden his experiences and learn leadership decision making.

The award, named for the Purina Company's founder, William H. Danforth, is directed toward land-grant schools in each state. A&M is Texas' land-grant university.

Sanders has won numerous awards and honors while at Texas A&M. He is a member of the meat and livestock judge teams, Saddle and Sirolo and Alpha Zeta, Phi Eta Sigma and Phi Kappa Phi honor fraternities.

The student has an overall grade point ratio of 2.77, which means that his grades are mostly A's.
