

Kerr Is Given $34,753 Award

Dr. Kirklyn M. Kerr, instructor in veterinary pathology at Texas A&M's College of Veterinary Medicine, has been awarded a $34,753 Health, Education and Welfare grant for a research project related to heart disease.

The research, titled "Studies on the Role of Mycoplasma in Heart Disease," will last three years. Dr. Kerr said he expects the HEW grants to remain constant each year.

"We hope we will be able to relate some points of the research to rheumatic fever," Dr. Kerr remarked. "Exact causes of rheumatic fever have not been determined. With mycoplasma, which is known to cause heart disease in animals, we hope to show some relationship to the process of rheumatic fever."

Dr. Kerr defined mycoplasma as a micro-organism which falls between bacteria and viruses.

A series of experiments will involve the effect of mycoplasma on avian embryos, germ-free dogs and tissue cultures. The experiments will be conducted in the Veterinary Pathology Department.

Co-investigators for the study are Dr. Charles H. Bridges, Veterinary Pathology Department head, and Dr. Ralph Storts, associate professor of veterinary pathology.
