

Every Night Is Movie Night At A&M's Grove Theater

Every night is movie night this summer at Aggieland as the Memorial Student Center Directorate Committee provides a slate of top movies at the Grove Outdoor Theater nightly at 8:30.

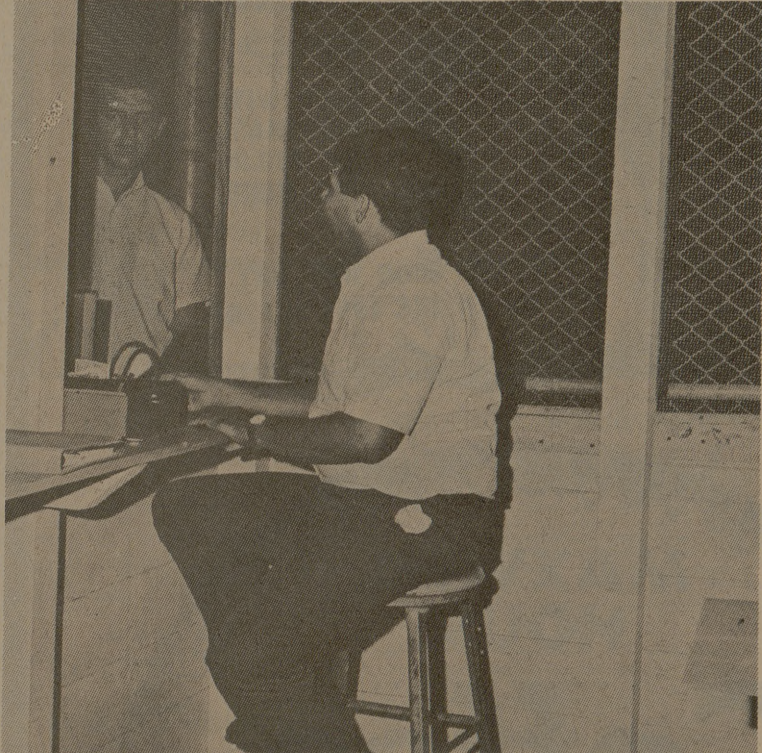

"Although the movies aren't exactly world premier showings," says Movie Manager Rudy Gomez, "they are as good, often more recent, than those on television, and there are no commercials — only an occasional train zooming by within a few yards of the audience momentarily interrupts the show under the stars."

Gomez says that the best part about the Grove Theater is that it's free for Aggies with ID cards. For others it's 40 cents for adults and 20 cents for children under 12.

The Grove is manned by students who run projectors and sell tickets, cold drinks, snow cones and pop corn. The staff is under the supervision of Gomez, who is an architect student.

"Attendance so far has been real good," reports Gomez.

He attributes this to the fact that an evening at the Grove is a casual affair, and provides an entertaining way to cool off and relax after a day with the books.

TICKET WINDOW IN OPERATION

ACTION IN THE PROJECTION ROOM

NO SALES PITCH NECESSARY

Where there is a movie being shown, there is bound to be a popcorn machine close by. Here, Orlan Franks, right, stays busy at the Grove's concession stand.
