

Famous Propeller Still Turns At A&M

ENOLA GAY PROPELLER?

Dr. Richard Thomas, associate aerospace engineering professor at Texas A&M, inspects the giant propeller used to drive the university's 7 x 10-foot wind tunnel. The propeller purportedly came off the Enola Gay, the B-29 which dropped the first atomic bomb.

An historic old propeller keeps churning along at Texas A&M. Local campulogues has it that the propeller used to drive A&M's wind tunnel came off the Enola Gay, the B-29 which dropped the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima Aug. 6, 1945.

While neither confirming nor denying this legend, Dr. Richard E. Thomas, associate aerospace engineering professor, says there is little doubt the propeller was specially designed for the world's first atomic operation.

Dr. Thomas, who directs A&M's wind tunnel projects, notes this particular propeller is made of aluminum, rather than steel which normally is used for propellers.

Aluminum propellers, he explained, would reduce the weight of an aircraft, a critical factor for a B-29 carrying an atomic payload.

The propeller was obtained from Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in 1959.

Whatever its military application of more than two decades ago, the large four-bladed propeller is now aiding in the research and testing of various aerodynamic projects having both military and commercial ramifications.

Installed in a 7x10-foot find tunnel at A&M's Easterwood Airport, the propeller was used in 1963 for low-speed stability tests leading to the design of the Gemini space capsule. More recently, it has been employed for research in the development of Bell helicopters and LTV jet fighters now being used in Viet Nam.

One of its more unusual applications, Dr. Thomas recalls, involved simulating wind velocities to test the structural design for the space needle at San Antonio's HemisFair next year.

The propeller also has seen service in various experiments testing the wind resistance of the new safer "break-away" highway signs designed and developed by A&M's Texas Transportation Institute.

Dr. James Boone To Attend Institute

Dr. James L. Boone Jr., assistant professor of industrial education at Texas A&M, will participate in a Purdue University Summer Institute July 10-21.

Boone joins 35 vocational and technical teacher educators from throughout the United States to develop teacher education curricula.

The rose comes very close to man's standard of perfection. Its delicate beauty seems to mock every effort of the artist or camera to capture it. But is the rose really God's masterpiece? Hardly!

For its beauty is passive. It brightens life only for those who seek it out and gaze upon it. And in but a few days it withers and is ugly.

God's masterpiece is MAN. For with all his waywardness and selfishness, Man is capable of reflecting the love of God. When he lets God touch his life he is able to bring happiness and faith to others. He doesn't have to wait until he is noticed. He can actively bring spiritual blessings to his fellow men.

As the gardener cultivates the rose, the Church cultivates the lives of men. Always it strives to help us become all that God wants us to be.
