

Statistics Institute Enters Medical Consulting Program

Texas A&M's Institute of Statistics has entered into a cooperative agreement with the Texas Medical Center in Houston to provide consulting services.

Dr. H. O. Hartley, director of the Institute of Statistics, said the institute's faculty will give scientific assistance to the Common Research Computer Facility of the center and its sponsoring institutions.

Baylor University's College of Medicine and the University of Texas' affiliated institutions are the sponsors.

Dr. Hartley said the consulting service is intended to benefit all biomedical scientists affiliated with the Common Research Computer Facility who require statistical methods as a research tool. The services will cover all aspects of biostatistical, biomathematical and public health data problems arising in their research.

The agreement will be reviewed for renewal on a six month basis, Dr. Hartley explained. He estimated the institute faculty will spend 40 to 50 days in consultations during that time.

Coordinators for the project are Dr. Hartley and Dr. Richard T. Eastwood, executive vice president of the Texas Medical Center and Common Research Computer Facility executive committeeman.

Available for consulting services from the institute in addition to Hartley are J. G. Darroch, E. E. Dayhoff, R. J. Freund, C. E. Gates, R. R. Hocking, J. N. K. Rao, L. J. Ringer and W. B. Smith.

"We have had very close contact with the Texas Medical Center for four years," Hartley pointed out. "Our faculty has actively participated in the TMC's annual symposia in biostatistics in the life sciences."

"This agreement is the natural outcome of close cooperation," he added. "We are looking forward to getting involved in a rich spectrum of problems involved in biomedical research which will be a real challenge to statistical methodology."

M. E. Profs Attend Meet

Two representatives of Texas A&M's Mechanical Engineering Department will present papers at a national conference next week in Seattle, Wash.

They will read papers during the ninth Heat Transfer Conference of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Dr. L. A. Hale, assistant professor, will speak Monday. His topic is "Surface Temperature Fluctuations in Pool Boiling of Refrigerant 11."

"Radiation Heat Transfer for Straight Fins for Trapezoidal Profile" is the title of a paper to be given Tuesday by Prof. E. S. Holdredge, joint author with Dr. R. D. Holstead of Louisiana Polytechnic Institute. Dr. Holstead earned his Ph.D. at A&M.

CS Youngsters Perform In Fallout Theater Show

Two one-act plays featuring College Station youngsters will be staged nightly Aug. 14-16 in Texas A&M's Fallout Theater.

"Flora of the Flower Shop," a melodrama, is the 8 p.m. curtain raiser. "Land, Ho!" a musical comedy, follows.

Both plays are directed by Mrs. Nancy Wick, an English major at A&M. They are in conjunction with summer programs sponsored by recreation departments of the cities of Bryan and College Station.

C. K. Esten, Aggie Players director, is supervisor of the creative dramatics programs.

"Flora" spotlights a cast of 10 to 12-year-olds, while "Land, Ho!" gives top billing to 16 teenagers and seven small children.

Esten said the entire program keeps young people alert to good theater. He would like for a lighter program to be continued in the fall and spring.

Many of the teenagers will help the younger children with makeup. Providing music for the evening will be "The Madmen" combo of College Station.

"Flora's" cast includes Lisa Halliwell, Gail Fenley, Denise Dodd, Lenore Meish, Betty Cannon, Jill Sanders, Elaine Kettle-borough, Debby Cannon, Tom Sanders, Carol Wick, David Walsh, Michael Eisner, Kenny Hughes, Nancy Lancaster and Julie Westphal.

Reid Pearson has charge of makeup and Glenn Cochman is responsible for set design.

Listed in the cast for "Land, Ho!" are Reid Pearson, Brodie Pate, Nancy Cronk, Becky Upham, Michelle Mitchell, Judy Elmquist, Dot Wehrly, Scott Wilson, Richard Stewart, Arthur Sittler, Bob Kaiser, Bill Rowe-kamp, Bruce Wick, Heather Gaines, Greg Sittler and Laura Lancaster.
