HELPING HAND

His facial wounds bandaged, a U. S. Marine gets a helping hand from a buddy who carries both their rifles after battle near Cham Son in northern South Vietnam. Twenty Marines were wounded in the battle when the North Vietnamese regulars and Viet Cong attackers were repelled as they tried to overrun the command post of the 3rd Battalion, 5th Marines. Viet Cong Bullet Wounds Houstonian

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Lance Cpl. John L. Burton, a Texan at war, was walking the point out in front of his company when Viet Cong struck from three sides.

The first time he was lucky. They missed.
Burton, a 21-year-old Marine from Houston, ducked for cover and, with help from other men in the company, chased the enemy off.

A few minutes later Burton was leading his company across some rice paddies in a valley in the Chu Lai area, and the Viet Cong struck again. A ricocheting bullet tore into his right hip. It was a jagged bullet and left a bad wound.

It knocked him down and he lay there a few minutes before some hospital corpsmen could pull him back to safety and patch him up.

Burton had been scared before, but for some reason he was not this time.

"I don't know why," he said. "I just wasn't. I don't know how

I really felt."

He joined the Marine Corps in May 1966, and was in Vietnam five months before being wounded. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe H. Burton, of Houston.

A&M Rifle Team Sets Organization

Texas A&M's 1967-68 rifle team, member of the Southwest Rifle Association, will hold an organizational meeting Monday.

Maj. Luther Crum, team advisor, said the first meeting will be at 5:15 p.m. in Room 101 of the Trigon classroom wing. Interested students are invited, he added.

Last year's team placed second in the SWRA with individual shooting honors captured by Christopher West of San Antonio, a junior this year.

The team fires matches against the University of Texas-Arlington, Hardin-Simmons, St. Mary's, Trinity, Rice, Texas Tech and other competitions.
