Tech Lineup Is Altered

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Coach J. T. King of Texas Tech announced a probable shakeup in his lineup for the game with Mississippi State here Saturday night, necessitated by injuries.

Safety Gary Golden, who suffered a knee injury in Tech's 19-13 victory over Texas Saturday night, probably will miss the Mississippi State game. Larry Alford, a sophomore who subbed for him against Texas, will be the starter.

Other doubtful starters are linebacker Ed Mooney, who bruised his knee, and fullback Jacky Stewart, favoring an ankle sprain.

If Stewart is not able to play, King said left halfback Kenny Baker would move to fullback behind sophomore Tony Butler, and Roger Freeman would replace Baker at right half.

Grid Picks And Politics

By GARY SHERER

After last week's predictions result (4-6-0), I feel like the favorite son candidate who has just lost in a landslide election.

Politicians are a fortunate lot, they can make sweeping positive statements and then retract them by saying they were misquoted. After the disaster of Sept. 30, I claim a politician's right to say I was misquoted.

Falling in that, the only alternative is to try again. So like the perennial candidate, here goes the hat into the ring again.

TEXAS A&M 21, FLORIDA STATE 14
In your heart you know its right.

NOTRE DAME 42, IOWA 0
A comeback win over a 'lame duck'.

FLORIDA 23, LSU 20
Tigers demand a recount.

ALABAMA 26, MISSISSIPPI 10
Tide suffering from 'poll watching'.

NORTHWESTERN 16, PURDUE 15
Boilermakers' bandwagon is less one Wildcat.

UCLA 24, PENN STATE 15
The incumbents can't handle the Bruins.

GEORGIA 27, SOUTH CAROLINA 13
Gamecock campaign falls short.

CLEMSON 14, GEORGIA TECH 12
Ramble Wreck fails to 'get out the vote'.

TEXAS 17, OKLAHOMA STATE 7
Hog-beaters can't 'brainwash' Longhorns.

INDIANA 18, ILLINOIS 14
Hoosiers 'stuff' the ballot boxes.

ARKANSAS 21, TCU 7
Razorbacks score a 'grass roots' victory.

A week like the one just past would make a candidate yell, "I was robbed," but also like a political loser, one must take defeat with a smile. Using the regular platitudes, like "we must continyuh" and "strive for unity," we will hope for a better tabulation this Saturday.

On a more serious note, the Aggies entertain Florida State Saturday night. So far, the Aggies road back has been a rocky one, to say the least. The Maroon and White have suffered three straight losses and are really hurting physically.

The Seminoles share the Aggies plight of not winning a game as yet this season. They, however, tied Alabama and scored 37 points against the Crimson Tide in the process. The Aggies will have their hands full Saturday night and a packed Kyle Field will help to lessen the load.

The Aggie Fish open their football season at Kyle Field Thursday night with the Texas Christian Wogs the competition. Last year, the Fish finished with a 2-2-1 mark which included a loss to the Wogs at Fort Worth. This year's edition will be out to avenge that defeat.

Gametime is 7:30.

Stallings Respects Seminole Offense

By JERRY GRISHAM

Two things are on Coach Gene Stallings' mind these days—Florida State and injuries.

In Tuesday's weekly press conference the Aggie mentor spoke of the Seminoles with respect.

"Against Alabama, they played a tremendous game," he said. "It just wasn't the same team, or rather they didn't play the same against Alabama as they did against Houston."

Florida St. was beaten 33-13 by Houston and tied Alabama 37-37.

The Seminoles kept the Crimson Tide defense off balance Coach Stallings commented.

"IF ALABAMA rushed, they threw a short pass over the middle and if the defense dropped back for the pass they would run the fullback draw. It was Alabama who was playing catchup the whole game."

He noted that Florida St. averages about 40 passes in each game. The Aggies who are known as a passing team have only averaged 27 passes per game.

With such a passing team coming to town, Aggie fans can take heart in Stallings' assertion that the Aggies' pass defense is improving.

He pointed out that defensive back Tom Sooy made some "good plays" against LSU.

BUT WHEN it comes to specifics, "I can't think of many things we've done real good except the kicking game," he said.

"Steve O'Neal has been a bright spot for us," Stallings noted. The Aggie punter is currently ranked among the top punters in the nation. He combines accuracy and distance to push opponents back to their own goal. He has kicked 20 times for an average of 44.8 yards.

The Aggie coach listed six members of the A&M football squad who are not seeing contact in practice this week.

Larry Stegent, the sophomore fullback, is still limited by a broken bone in his hand. He will probably see action this week, however, since the injury didn't keep him out of the LSU game.

WENDELL HOUSLEY injured his other shoulder against LSU. He had already hurt one against Purdue. Stallings said that it would be Thursday before it was known whether he would be able to play Saturday.

Defensive lineman Bill Kubecka has a shoulder injury and defensive lineman Lynn Odom is still plagued by a hurt ankle. Defensive tackle Grady Allen is still sidelined by a dislocated elbow and offensive tackle Don Schneider has a cut on his forehead. Only the weekend will tell if these will see action.

Defensive lineman Winston Beam, out since the SMU game with an injured knee is better said Stallings but his condition is also doubtful.

"PURDUE WAS the roughest one," Stallings said in appraising the injuries. "They took more out of us physically than LSU."

"I haven't lost one bit of confidence in the squad," he said in commenting on the team. "Not one little bit."

When asked what the team needed most, experience, speed, talent, or what, the Aggie coach commented "We need to win." AMEN.

Weaver Was Number Two, So He Just Tried Harder

Before the current football season began close followers of the Texas Aggies jokingly said that if Mark Weaver were injured, A&M would lose its second-team offensive line.

That was because the senior from Victoria was listed as the back-up man at both tackles, both guards and at strong end.

Because of the rules on numbers, he became the first player in Aggie history to be issued two numbers—79 for use at offensive guard and tackle and 82 for use at offensive end. Thus far he has worn only 79.

But Weaver evidently didn't like that second-team label, even if it covered nearly the whole line. So, he worked himself into the number one spot at weak guard and if he continues to play as he did against LSU he isn't apt to be dislodged.

A&M's offensive line didn't play well as a unit, especially on pass protection but Weaver, for one, turned in a pretty good performance.

Weaver came to Texas A&M after winning all-state honors as an end at Victoria. He won a frosh numeral at A&M but didn't play enough as a sophomore to letter. Last year, as a junior, he lettered at a tackle position. Last spring he split time between end and tackle. Now he is a guard.

This shifting around indicates that Weaver has athletic ability and his being on the first unit also indicates that he is using it well this fall.

At 6-2 and 210, Weaver has adequate size and he is a good blocker with quickness. With seven games remaining, he could develop into one of the top hands on the Aggie line.

His dad, W. O. Weaver, is division manager for Sears in Victoria and therefore, the Weavers have moved around a bit. Mark was born in Mesa, Ariz. and has lived in Madison, Ind. and Victoria.

He was married during the summer prior to his junior season. He is majoring in physical education and biology and plans to follow a coaching career.

Chrysler announces the Two Way Interview...

- Too many job interviews these days have an unfortunate tendency to be rather one-sided. They usually leave you wondering, "But what's in it for me?"
- Chrysler Space has changed all that. We believe an interview should be a two-way street. We find out about you, and you find out about us.
- For instance, you'll find that Chrysler is currently engaged in a wide range of forward-thinking space programs such as: ADVANCED LAUNCH VEHICLE CONFIGURATION STUDIES • SPACE OPTICS TECHNOLOGY • SPACE STATION STUDIES • AAP MISSION PLANNING • ADVANCED SPACECRAFT SYSTEM DESIGN • PLANETARY ORBITER MAPPING STUDIES • MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY RESEARCH and other similar programs.
- You'll also discover how you can pursue your education under Chrysler's Tuition Assistance Plan. And you'll be told about the atmosphere of creative freedom that abounds at Chrysler Space.
- If you're majoring in science or engineering, and are interested in a challenging aerospace career, get in touch with the man from Chrysler. He'll be on campus soon. See him then, or to arrange for an interview in advance, write to Mr. Ralph Radick, Personnel Dept. CR-3. If you wish, include your phone number and the times convenient for you to receive calls.
- You'll receive an immediate reply.
