

Auto Trusts Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department said today it has been conducting an anti-trust investigation into the automobile industry for many years but no decision has been made as to whether any action should be taken.

The department made the comments in a one-paragraph statement related to a Wall Street Journal story which said the department has in its files material for an antitrust suit aimed at breaking up General Motors, the world's largest industrial corporation.

The statement said "the legal and factual issues under consideration are difficult and complex. Neither the antitrust division nor the Department of Justice has made any decision as to what action or actions, if any, should be taken." The Wall Street Journal dispatch from Washington by Louis M. Kohlmeier, says the "paper bomb . . . consists of 104 neatly typed pages all in formal shape for presentation to a federal court."

Profs Attend Meet

Two professors from Texas A&M will attend a national education conference on teaching agronomy in Washington, D.C., November 3-4th.

Drs. J. F. Mills and R. D. Staten, both members of the Texas A&M Soils and Crop Sciences Department, will attend several symposium-type meetings dealing with necessary changes for the future in teaching agronomy.

PROTECTIVE HEADGEAR REQUIRED BEGINNING JANUARY 1, 1968—All motorcyclists and their passengers will be required by law to wear safety approved headgear whenever riding a motorcycle after the first of January. Headgear meeting Texas Department of Public Safety standards must bear a manufacturer's identification sticker on the back and reflective material on the sides (as shown in the photographs). A list of approved headgear may be seen at any police department, sheriff's office, Department of Public Safety office, or stores retailing motorcycle headgear.

VC Harass Inauguration

By GEORGE MCARTHUR SAIGON (AP) — In time of peace it could have been a fireworks display to amuse President Nguyen Van Thieu, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and 2,000 other guests at the inaugural reception.

But this is a time of war—and it was the real thing. Viet Cong mortars landing just 150 yards from the brightly lit ballroom caused the sharp explosions and the flashes in the night sky.

The blasts brought a sudden halt to the conversations. But the band kept playing an American tune without missing a note. It was 7:35 p.m. Humphrey in a natty dinner jacket with embroidered lapels, had just entered the glowing ballroom of South Vietnam's Independence Palace for a reception honoring the nation's newly inaugurated president.

With U. S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker Humphrey moved across the red-flowered carpet toward the center of the guests.

Three sharp explosions reverberated at that moment. Outside the southern windows, the night sky lit up, three times in quick succession.

Humphrey paused in a conversation with Bunker, then calmly resumed the chat. Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U. S. commander in Vietnam, glanced at the windows, his hands behind his back in pensive pose, then also resumed his conversation.

"Those are probably mortar shells," a correspondent said to Humphrey. And Humphrey replied: "I gather they might be."

In seconds the gala reception given by Thieu was as gay as before. Only outside was the damage apparent.

With the new president was Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky. Besides Westmoreland, and Bunker, the commander of the U. S. Air Force in Vietnam, Gen. William Momyer, was present with most of his top staff.

Humphrey's calm was typical of an extraordinary evening. There was not one slight feminine shriek of panic as the shells exploded and the windows rattled.

As calmly as though nothing had happened, a muted loudspeaker soon announced that the state dinner would begin at 8:00 p.m.

Westmoreland, in a white uniform and his full array of medals, made a professional observation on the shelling.

"I thought they sounded like 75mm recoilless rifle rounds," he said.

A&M Grads Serve On Vietnam Tours

Texas A&M graduates of 1965 and 1966 have received U. S. Army assignments in Vietnam.

First Lt. Mario A. Macaluso of San Antonio was assigned to an advisory team of the Vietnamese Army's III Corps. A 1966 graduate, 2nd Lt. Reginald D. Newton of Beaumont went to the 124th Transportation Company near Cat Lai. Both were commissioned at A&M.

Because Dallas
... has had the fastest growth rate of any major metropolitan area during the '60s,
... leads the Southwest in wholesale sales, volume of banking business, number of headquartered companies worth $1 million or more,
... is the nation's third largest insurance center and convention center,
... provides cultural stimulation in a cosmopolitan and inviting environment . . .
... because of these factors and others, Dallas' businesses offer you the opportunities to grow . . . and go. Here's why: Dallas Metro Area had a net increase of 29,470 new employees in its work force during the past 12 months. Objective forecasts say there will be at least 25,000 new jobs to be filled in metro Dallas every year through 1970.
You can become an integral part of Dynamic Dallas, a city on the move. Sign up for the Operation Native Sons and Daughters career employment interviews, NOW.
