How Sweet It Is! Aggies Beat TU, Win Undisputed SWC Championship

Yarborough Sets Forum Address

Ralph Yarborough, United States Senator from Texas, has been named a Nov. 30 Great Issues' Political Forum speaker at Texas A&M.

Bill Preston, Political Forum chairman of the Memorial Student Center's Great Issues Committee, said Senator Yarborough will discuss "Why I Am a Democrat" at a 7:30 p.m. public-free program in the MSC ballroom.

Yarborough, a prospective candidate for governor of Texas, has served in the Senate since April 20, 1957. He is a member of numerous Senate committees including appropriations, labor and welfare, post office and civil service, and the special committee on the aging.

He is chairman of the Subcommittees on Veterans' Affairs and Postal Affairs. In addition, Yarborough is a member of subcommittees on health and education, contested nominations, retirement, health of the elderly, frauds affecting the elderly, federal, state and community services, agriculture, District of Columbia, Legislative, military construction, treasury and post office, and long-term care for the aging.

A native of Chandler in Henderson County, Yarborough attended Chandler and Tyler schools and studied at Sam Houston State Teachers College and the U. S. Military Academy. He later graduated with highest honors from the University of Texas Law School.

During World War II, Yarborough served with the 97th Infantry Division in combat and with occupation forces in Japan. He was discharged as a colonel in 1946.

Yarborough, former presiding judge of the Third Administrative Judicial District, was an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor of Texas in 1952, 1954 and 1956.

The speaker is a member and former national chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States.

Security Officers To Talk Traffic

New traffic laws concerning university security departments will be emphasized in sessions Wednesday and Thursday at the Memorial Student Center.

Nola White of the Texas Attorney General's Office will discuss facets of Senate Bill 162 and answer questions from the floor.

The presentation is in connection with a meeting of the Texas Association of College and University Traffic and Security Departments.

Ed E. Powell, A&M campus security chief and association president, said 45 participants are expected from 34 universities, senior and junior colleges in Texas and New Mexico.

The conference opens at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday with the Rev. Lloyd Elder, pastor of the First Baptist Church of College Station, Bennie A. Zinn, A&M associate dean of students, and Rufus L. Taylor of the University of Texas at Arlington, on the program.

BRAZOS COUNTY Judge Bill Vance will discuss laws on athletic ticket scalping following remarks by Taylor.

Ira E. Scott, coordinator of police training for A&M's Engineering Extension Service, will cover investigation of homicides.

Dr. T. Paige Carruth, dean of student life at West Texas State University, will speak at Thursday's opening session.

Bill Caffee, director of police and fire protection at Southern Methodist University, will review specific laws to aid peace officers in accident investigation.

N. K. Woerner, manager of the Statistical Services branch of the Texas Department of Public Safety, also will discuss new laws on accident investigation.

WALLACE BEASLEY, director of Bryan Building & Loan Association, Your Savings Center, since 1919. —Adv.

of the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officers Training and Standards, will cover plans for establishment of minimum standards for law enforcement officers.

Speaker for a 7 a.m. Thursday banquet at Sbis Hall will be State Rep. G. F. (Gus) Mutscher of Brenham.

Two panel discussions zero in on problems of campus security officers. William L. Purse, assistant campus security chief at the University of Texas, will lead the Wednesday panel. Chairing the Thursday panel will be George E. Doughty, campus security chief at Dallas County Junior College.

A&M Magazine Gets Top Rating

The Texas A&M Agriculturist won top honors at the Agricultural College Magazine Association convention at Chicago and its managing editor was elected national vice president.

A&M's quarterly student publication won on the basis of best presentation of technical material.

Managing Editor John McCarroll, junior agricultural journalism major from Odessa, was elected ACMA national vice president.

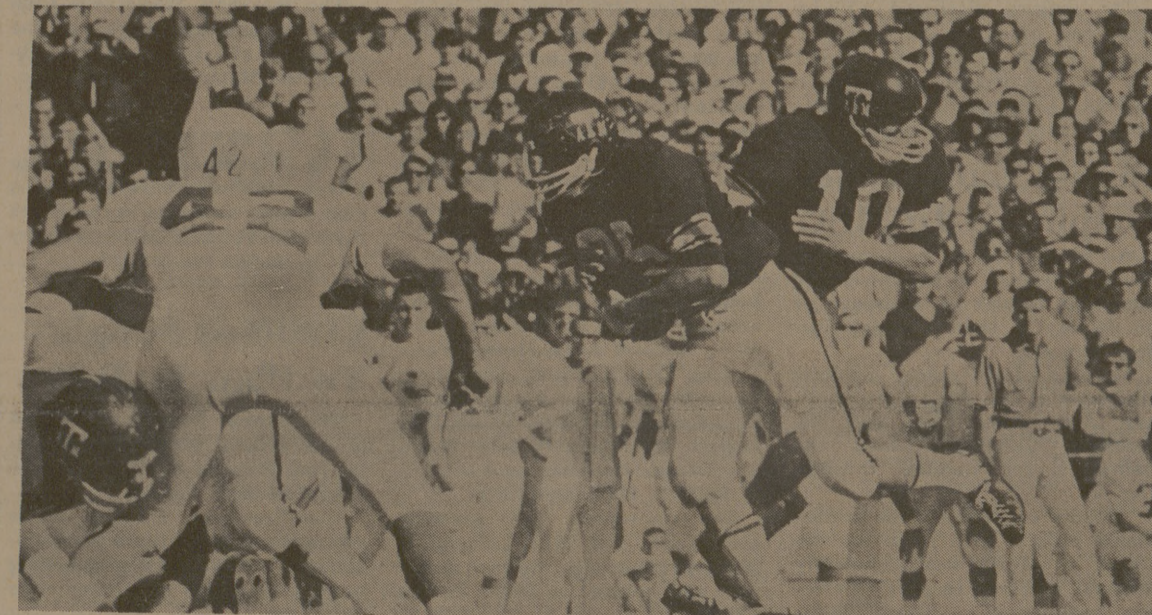

The magazine competition was sponsored by the Farm Journal. Its editor-elect, Lane M. Palmer, presented the trophy signifying best publication to Manuel Pina Jr., the 1967-68 editor of the Agriculturist. Pina is a senior agricultural education major from Melvin.

The winning issue of the Agriculturist was published last spring and edited by Leroy Shafer, who is now an agricultural journalism graduate student at Iowa State University.

Ags Face 'Bama In Cotton Bowl

By GARY SHERER
Battalion Sports Editor

During the 1956 season, the then Aggie Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant used to refer to eight players as the heart of his team. Among those eight, singled out because of their participation at the famous Junction training camp, was a player with the nickname of "Bebes."

That season was also remembered as the last time an A&M team had beaten Texas. All those memories of 1956 must have popped into Coach Gene (Bebes) Stallings' thoughts before, during or after the "Turkey Day" game of 1967.

It is sure, however, that those thoughts were not the most important in the Aggie mentor's mind as he watched his Aggies topple Texas 10-7 before 50,000-plus at Kyle Field on Thanksgiving Day.

THAT WIN "made something happen" as far as the Aggies and Stallings were concerned. It gave the Maroon and White its first Southwest Conference championship since that same year of 1956. It gained an invitation to the Cotton Bowl for A&M, which ended a drought of 25 years.

It gave Texas Coach Darrell Royal his first defeat at the hands of the Aggies.

For Stallings, it will bring back an encounter with the man he has played for, coached under and admired, Bear Bryant.

When Bryant left Aggieland to "answer a call from home" in 1957, Stallings was a student assistant. Stallings later went to work for Bryant at Alabama and was one of the Bear's top assistants.

IT WAS from Alabama that Stallings was called to return to his alma mater to take over the head coaching job at A&M. Upon his arrival, people were impressed with the way this man set out to improve football fortunes at College Station.

Last Thursday afternoon in a sun-bathed Kyle Field, Stallings turned his optimistic words of 1965 into true, distinct fact.

It was a game that proved statistics are for losers but big plays are for winners. The Maroon and White defensive team had as much pressure put on it as those historical Alamo defenders did back in 1836. The Aggie hardnoses met with much better success, however.

AFTER PUSHING Texas around in the first half, the Ags were in a fight for their lives as the second half began. Charlie Riggs' 32-yard second quarter field goal was the only score on the south scoreboard as the final thirty minutes started.

A little more than a quarter later, another score went up on the board and it was 7-3 Texas.

It took Edd Hargett 16 seconds to erase that four-point deficit. Hargett hit the Aggies' answer to the "Old Faithful" geyser, Bob Long, with an 80-yard pass that broke Texas' back.

THAT SUCCESSFUL pass play (longest of the SWC '67 season) was about all the offense the Aggies could muster in that hectic final half of play.

Then, following the final score of the day, the Aggie defense stopped Texas' efforts to get back that short-lived lead. And they did it with the method that Stallings has commended his team for all season—the big play.

It was fitting that the last offensive big play of the '67 regular season should be engineered by Hargett. The quarterback who Stallings describes as "very coachable" had started the Aggies' road back with a big play against Texas Tech. How many big plays have followed? Total in this case doesn't matter; what does is what these clutch occurrences have produced.

THE 10-7 WIN brought something back to Aggie football that has been missing since Bryant's departure, namely a winner. As mentioned, it brings a Cotton Bowl berth to Aggieland for the first time since 1942. That 25 years really seems a long time, when you consider that none of the present Aggie footballers were born yet when the Aggies last tasted Cotton.

Finally, it gave a twinge of happiness to those optimistic forces who engineered the "Ags Are Back" bumper stickers.

Tickets On Sale For Cotton Bowl

Seniors and graduate students lined up outside the athletic business office this morning as Cotton Bowl tickets went on sale.

Juniors and seniors may buy tickets Thursday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., and freshman can purchase them beginning at 8 a.m. Friday.

Student tickets are $3 and date tickets are $6, Wally Groff, athletic department business director, announced. Faculty members who bought season tickets may also get tickets for the Jan. 1 game with Alabama for $3, and may buy spouse or date tickets at the regular price, Groff noted.

"All tickets will be for reserved seats," Groff explained. "Seniors and graduate students will get tickets in Sections 21 and 22, near the 40-yard line in the lower deck, and other students will get seats in sections 15 through 21."

Groff said student and date tickets will be basically the same except that stubs will be pulled from student tickets and they will be stamped accordingly. Student identification cards will be required of anyone presenting a student ticket at the gate.
