

College Police Hear Mutscher

State Rep. G. F. (Gus) Mutscher of Brenham urged a new and tough approach to lawlessness on state and national levels here Thursday night.

"We should begin to take steps to protect ourselves against the rapidly increasing rate of crime," Mutscher declared. "Other countries with lower living standards do not accept high crime rates. Neither should we."

Mutscher, learning candidate for speaker of the House of Representatives spoke to the Texas Association of College and University Traffic and Security Departments meeting at Texas A&M.

"Crimes which keep many Americans behind locked doors at night are relatively rare in foreign countries because their police and courts crack down hard," he added. "Their law enforcement authorities command more respect. Justice is more firm and the rights of society are at least on the equal with the rights of criminals."

Mutscher contended that Americans ignore a simple and uncomplicated truth regarding philosophy of crime and lawlessness. No rational man, he explained, would be inclined to attempt a crime if he had good reason to believe it would result in punishment.

The solon said the necessary response to increasing crime is better training for law officers.

"It has become increasingly evident," Mutscher said, "that there is a need for a highly specialized training program for our police."

American forces move toward the crest of Hill 875 at Dak To, South Vietnam, where a 21-day battle saw at least 285 Americans die. The central highlands hill is said to be completely lacking in strategic value to the enemy, who lost more than 1,400 men, according to U. S. sources. Allied commanders privately confess they do not know why the enemy chose to fight this battle. (AP Wirephoto)

Entomology Head Named Winner Of National Award

Dr. Perry L. Adkisson, acting head of the Texas A&M Entomology Department, has received the J. Everett Bussart Memorial Award for 1967.

The award was presented Thursday morning by the Entomological Society of America during its annual meeting Nov. 27-30 in New York City.

Adkisson was presented a $1,000 check and an engraved plaque in recognition of "outstanding research in economic entomology conducted in North America and U. S. possessions."

The annual award was established in 1965 by the Velsicol

Chemical Corporation of Chicago, Ill., where Bussart was chief entomologist. Adkisson is the second national winner of the honor.

The A&M entomologist is recognized internationally for his work in insect ecology and has received much credit in helping stop the westward migration of the cotton boll weevil.

Adkisson is best known for his research on photoperiodic control of insect diapause (dormancy) and has published several papers on the subject. Photoperiodism, often called biological clock, is the response of an insect to light and darkness, and to the long days of summer and the short days of winter.

The Bussart Award to Adkisson is based mostly on the scientist's studies of the effect of photoperiod on diapause and its application to insect control.

He was selected as a Senior Postdoctoral Fellow for study at Harvard University from 1963-64. Next, he was elected a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1964. That same year, he was presented the Faculty Distinguished Achievement Award for Research by the A&M Association of Former Students.

Johnson Claims 'Time Right' For McNamara's Departure

By BOB HORTON Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson was described Thursday as feeling the time has become "propitious," or favorable, for Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's departure from the Pentagon.

Why he reached this decision at this particular time, remains the unanswered question.

Official statements were issued by both men but they shed little light on why the 51-year-old Pentagon chief should be relieved now when he made clear he would stay longer.

Sources, reminded that McNamara's move to the World Bank could have been delayed until as late as Dec. 31, 1968, said merely that the President had come to feel the proper moment had arrived for letting him go-as McNamara was interested in doing.

That the President authorized the placing of McNamara's name before World Bank directors without informing him at the time was confirmed by George Christian, White House press secretary. Christian said George D. Woods, the outgoing bank president, informed McNamara of the latter's nomination, but he did not know whether this was before or after it was actually submitted.

McNamara and Johnson had discussed the matter in mid-October, however, even to the point of mulling over possible successors to the Pentagon job. Nevertheless, after word of McNamara's nomination leaked out Monday Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., questioned publicly whether McNamara was being eased out of the administration.

the Pentagon portray him as surprised he was being mustered out so quickly. But a McNamara co-worker detected no surprise in McNamara's reactions the past few days-in fact found him more casual and relaxed.

McNamara friends in the Capitol put forth the thesis that Johnson was easing McNamara off into a public service post where he would be forced into silence about Vietnam war policy.

Pentagon associates of the defense chief reject this idea. True, McNamara might be a political target in the presidential campaign, but this could also work to the President's advantage.

"Share the heat - that's the standard thing in this government," one official said. "A president needs lots of targets around him to absorb the lightning."

Asked whether McNamara was leaving by his own choice, Phil G. Goulding, Pentagon press officer, said in somewhat of an understatement: "The inference I get is he intends to assume the duties of a new job." And, after a pause: "Of course, he's leaving on his own volition."

Goulding said the biggest part of McNamara's budget work could be out of the way by about March.

White House sources did not discount the possibility, however, that the president might move much more quickly in proposing a successor to Congress—perhaps by mid-December.

Naval Reserve Officer Unit Adds Five New Members Here

Naval Reserve Research Company 8-3, a unit for Naval Reserve Officers in the Bryan-College Station area, has recently added five new members.

Lt. Cmdr. William R. Smith, a professor in the school of Business Administration, joined the unit from Rochester, New York, where he was commanding officer of a similar unit.

Back from Vietnam is Lt. Van Eaton, a superintendent for construction for R. B. Butler. He served near Da Nang with U. S. Mobil Construction Battalion Six, whose mission was to support the Marines, and construct cantonments, galleys and food storage facilities. He is a 59 graduate of A&M in Civil Engineering.

who is currently a professor of Forestry and Range Science, came here from the Agricultural Experiment Station at Louisiana State University. Prior to coming, Merrifield was commanding officer of a reserve unit in Ruston, Louisiana.

Also joining the unit are Lt. (jg.) William Wardle, a graduate student in Marine Biology; and Lt. F. J. Trost, assistant professor in the School of Architecture. Before coming to A&M, Wardle was stationed in Morocco with the U. S. Navy and Trost was a private architect.

The research unit meets at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Room 209 of the Petroleum Engineering building on campus. All Naval Reserve officers in the area who wish to affiliate with a unit should contact R. M. Olson, commanding officer of the local unit.

Guess who forgot his NoDoz.

As Rip Van Winkle failed to learn, there's a time and a place for sleeping. If you find yourself nodding off at the wrong time or in the wrong place, reach for your NoDoz. (You do carry some with you at all times, don't you?) A couple of NoDoz and you're with it again. And NoDoz is non habit-forming. NoDoz. When you can't be caught napping.

THE ONE TO TAKE WHEN YOU HAVE TO STAY ALERT.
