Bridge Committee Sets Tournament

The MSC Bridge Committee is sponsoring a local bridge tournament Friday, Jan. 19, at 6:45 p.m. in the MSC Assembly Room to determine A&M's representatives in the regional Association of College Unions — International (ACU) tournament to be held in Arlington Feb. 23-24.

The local tournament is open to anyone who desires to participate; however, only full-time students who are academically qualified can represent A&M at the regional and higher level tournaments. The academic qualifications are: undergraduates—GPR 1.0 overall, 1.0 last semester, 1.0 midterm; graduates — GPR 2.0 overall, 2.0 last semester, 2.0 midterm; and neither can be on any kind of probation. Undergraduates and graduates are considered to be full-time students if they are carrying twelve and eight hours of courses, respectively.

Anyone interested in the tournament should come by the MSC Student Programs Office or call 846-8721, ext. 36 to pre-register by Friday, 4:30 p.m.

Entry fee is one dollar per person.

Teague Center Gets Sculpture

Informal ceremonies are scheduled at Texas A&M's Olin L. Teague Research Center Wednesday for dedication of a sculpture sphere presented by Albritton Engineering Corp. and Reynolds Metals Co.

The eight-foot-high sculpture, an aluminum work of art depicting space flight, will be permanently located outside the main entrance to the university's new research facility.

Ford D. Albritton Jr., president of the Bryan-based engineering firm and a 1943 graduate of Texas A&M, will exchange ceremonial remarks with A&M President Earl Rudder during the brief 11:30 a.m. ceremonies.

Joining Albritton in the presentation will be Bill Moore of St. Louis, Reynolds vice president and south-central region general manager, and Bill Clark of Houston, division sales manager of the firm headquartered at Richmond, Va.

program." In other Council business, was agreed to request that President Rudder place the Political Forum Committee solely under Council supervision. Presently the committee is responsible to the Council and the History and Government Department.

Charles W. Preston, committee chairman, said, "I have found extremely frustrating, if not impossible, to coordinate the committee and establish a worthwhile program operating under such structure."

The Council asked that action be taken on its proposal before Feb. 15 to allow time to select a chairman for next year's program.

New Engineering Program Graduates First Army Class

The maintainability engineering training program conducted by Texas A&M for the U. S. Army graduated its first class here Wednesday.

Seventeen civilian graduate students who have completed the two-year government training program were presented certificates. Several also received master's degrees in the new engineering science discipline.

Presentations were made by Col. George C. Benjamin, deputy director for maintenance, U. S. Army Material Command, Washington, D. C., and Col. Nathan I. Reiter Jr., Red River Army Depot commanding officer, Texarkana.

'Fighters' Needed For Bryan Follies

The "pink ladies" are looking for Aggies interested in appearing in the St. Joseph Hospital Auxiliary follies, "Paint the Town Pink" on Feb. 2 and 3. Ed Horner, Jr., of New York, director of the follies, stresses that he needs college age men for an "East Side Story" scene and for a fight scene. He is also looking for students who would like to learn easy dance routines for a teenaged scene in the follies.

Mr. Horner states that rehearsals will be short during final week and will be at night. Anyone interested in being in the follies is asked to come to the St. Andrew's Episcopal Church Ballroom Annex downtown in Bryan on 26th Street at 7 p.m. on Friday.

Colonel Benjamin was guest speaker for the 7 p.m. ceremony in the architecture auditorium.

A&M's Industrial Engineering Department has contract responsibility for instruction on campus and at the Red River depot's Logistics Intern Training Center. Numerous depot and A&M officials were present, according to Dr. A. W. Wortham, industrial engineering head.

In the program, top-ranked physicists and engineers studied research, development and design of new weapons systems in order to minimize maintenance costs.

The graduating maintainability interns' training included a year of on-the-job training and three semesters in the A&M graduate industrial engineering program. Two semesters were at the Logistics Intern Training Center at Texarkana and one was at A&M.

The first class includes Jerry A. Britton, The Dalles, Ore.; Vernon O. Chance, Santa Barbara, Calif.; John M. Cockerham, Greenville, Miss.; Dennis L. Cosentino, Sarver, Pa.; John A. Hafen, El Paso; Murray D. Hillman, Pascasoala, Miss.; James M. Hodges, Brunswick, Ga.; Truman W. Howard III, Alexandria, Va.

Also, James W. Lamb Jr., Kopperston, W. Va.; Billy G. Murphy, Broken Bow, Okla.; Joseph M. Mysliński, Perth Amboy, N. J.; Kenneth G. Pickett, Erath, La.; Robert L. Riedl, College Station; Harold N. Stafford, Hinesville, Ga.; Wayland D. Smith, Sweetwater; John H. Thompson, Laramie, Wyo., and Robert D. White, Gautier, Miss.
