

Grand Jury Called In Hippie Killing

GREENVILLE, Tex. (AP) — A grand jury will be paneled Thursday to consider charges against a quartet of hippies accused of slaying a companion and dumping his body near this Northeast Texas city.

THE BIGGEST item on the grand jury's agenda will be the slaying of Joseph E. Montcalm, 25, of Negaunee, Mich., whose battered and slashed body was found Jan. 21 on a rural road.

Four persons, described by police as hippies, have been charged with murder in Montcalm's death. Two of the youths, Thomas D.

Headley, 21, of Oakland, Calif., and Calvin C. Whiddon, 20, of Hialeah, Fla., waived extradition after being arrested in Baton Rouge, La., and were returned to Greenville Tuesday. They were held without bond after waiving a preliminary hearing on the charges.

CHARLES R. PERKINS, 21, of Miami Beach, Fla., and Robert S. Thomas Jr., 18, of San Francisco, Calif., have refused to waive extradition and remain in custody of officers in Baton Rouge.

SERVICES BUILDING
The newly-completed Services Building, adjacent to the A&M Press, will house Student Publications, the Department of Journalism, the University Post Office and other departments. Journalism classes are meeting in the $1.5 million structure this week for the first time. (Photo by Russell Autrey)

200 Women Due Here For Seminar

An estimated 200 women are expected to participate in the 10th Annual Seminar for Secretaries Feb. 17 at Texas A&M.

Mrs. Dorinne Glenn, president of the Bryan - College Station Chapter of the National Secretaries Association International, said secretaries from 50 cities in Texas and Louisiana may attend. Area secretaries interested in registering for the seminar may contact the seminar general chairman, Mrs. Edith Oden, Texas A&M Student Affairs secretary.

Mrs. Lorene Roby, A&M Education and Psychology instructor, will give the initial talk, "Learning is Living," following welcoming remarks by Engineering Dean

Services Building Completion Allows Offices To Move Soon

By CHARLES ROWTON
Battalion Editor

After Kyle Field, probably the most eagerly anticipated structure at Texas A&M is the $1.5 million Services Building. It is now very near completion, according to Charles Brunt, assistant manager of the System Physical Plants.

Original plans called for the completion of the building last August but changes in plans for the basement and bad weather have caused the delay.

"Our original contract did not call for a finished basement," Brunt said. However, it was decided to locate the Department of Journalism classrooms, which now occupy a portion of the basement in Nagle Hall, in the basement of the new building. Brunt blamed most of the delay on this change.

Work on the other floors is nearly complete and Brunt estimated total construction at 98 per cent complete.

The basement of the new building is connected to the A&M Press. In it will be a photography lab for those enrolled in journalism photography. According to the Department of Journalism, the lab will be twice the size of the present one in the basement of Nagle Hall.

Other departments to be located in the Services Building will be the University post office, laboratories of the state chemist, and the Texas Feed and Fertilizer Control Service.

Several unique features have been built into the building. Brunt said walls of two rooms have been specially designed for television use so that sound reflections off the walls will not feed back into the microphones.

Another feature is that interior building columns have been placed so that they are flush with the walls. This will allow more flexible office arrangements. A concrete wall has been built around one end of the building and granite chip aggregate has been added to part of the exterior of the building "to dress it up."

When construction is completed on the $1.5 million structure, the individual departments will be responsible for moving their offices and equipment into the building. At present, the journalism department is the only department to complete their moving process.

University Information and Student Publications are expected to move on Feb. 23.

A one-day setback was experienced by general contractors Vance and Thurmond Construction Company of Bryan a month ago when a coil in the heating system froze, broke and leaked water on the top floor.

The leakage occurred when a faulty valve did not allow the water in the heating system to circulate and the water froze in the 20 degree weather.

When the heating coil thawed out, the water started coming out. However, little damage was done, except to ceiling tiles in one room, Brunt said.

NEW BATT CAVE
The Battalion office will soon be moved from the basement of the YMCA to the second floor of the new Services Building. The Batt will make the move along with all student publications, Feb. 23.

Editor,
The Battalion:
Congratulations to Texas A&M on winning the 1967 Southwest Conference football championship. I feel the Aggies came through for me because last summer I picked the Aggies to win in Texas Football Magazine and later in The Dallas Times Herald.

I want to thank three Texas A&M students from Irving who presented a beautiful plaque to me. It reads: "To Louis Cox. Thanks for the Support. Texas Aggies, 1968 Cotton Bowl champs, 1967 SWC Champs." The plaque was presented by Steve Lance, Larry Shaw and Steve Orthwein.

I will always cherish the plaque, which will remind that I went against the general trend and selected the Aggies to win.
