Rain, Rain—Go Away!

By JOHN PLATZER

Miss Unpredictable, the weather, holds the key to the weekend for Aggie athletes who are scheduled to participate in four baseball games, a home track meet, a home golf match and a Houston tennis tournament.

A surge of bad weather washed out yesterday's home baseball game with the University of Minnesota and the first round of the four day tennis tournament, but is expected to clear for the weekend.

IF IT DOES, Coach Tom Chandler's baseballers will host Oklahoma State in a doubleheader beginning at 1:30 on the Travis Park Field in Bryan.

A&M will take a 4-4 season slate into the twinbill while three of their contests have lost a battle with the weather already this season. The Aggie Fish also have a 1:30 Saturday doubleheader on tap. It will be in Austin against the Texas University Yearlings.

THE AGGIE golf team will be making its first home appearance of the year with its Saturday match against Texas Christian University.

The golfers of Coach Henry Ransom had a match scheduled with Oklahoma, North Texas and Baylor on the A&M course March 11 but it too was rained out.

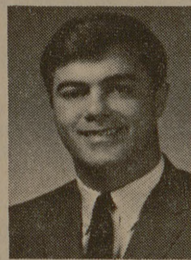

Southern Methodist University, Texas Tech and TCU will provide the competition for Coach Charley Thomas' track team's last home meet Saturday. Field events in the Klye Field affair will start at 1:30.

The Aggie tracksters have had the best luck of the spring sports teams, as they have had only one of five meets cancelled by the weather.

COACH OMAR Smith's Aggie tennis team has also had their share of run-ins with the elements.

They have had four of five home matches switched from outside to inside by the weather as well as yesterday's postponement of the start of the Les Bolstad Invitational in Houston.

The tennis tournament is considered one of the best in the nation and is scheduled to run through Sunday, weather permitting.

Cougars Will Fall

By GARY SHERER

Contrary to public belief (in Houston), the Houston Cougar basketball team is human. However, the populace of Houston can't be faulted too much (if you read what is written about the Cougars, you'd almost believe they are superhuman).

Coach Guy Lewis' talented five (just five, no more), romped through a fairly easy schedule of 28 games and have won three straight in the NCAA Tournament. But, believe it or not, the Cougars can be beaten!

Let's face it, the Cougars have only five men (it should be six but George Reynolds is ineligible). Because this fact exists, UCLA should be able to top the Cougars tonight.

Lewis, if he has taught his team anything, has instructed his players how not to foul. For with a no-depth team like the Cougars, even one man in foul trouble is disaster. The talented quintet has avoided this trouble thus far because they know how to play the game of basketball in a rough and tough but clean manner.

It was noticeable from the Texas Christian slaughter that the Cougars can get into foul trouble. They opened up with an unusual for them, full-court press on the hopelessly outmanned Horned Frogs and quickly they (Houston) got into foul trouble.

This then is the key! Get Houston off their regular way of playing and excess fouls will be the result.

UCLA Coach John Wooden has hinted at putting on a stall. This will be the maneuver he needs to get the Cougars off their game strategy. The stall will make Houston come after UCLA and many foul calls will be the result.

Many fouls will force Lewis to substitute and his glaring lack of bench strength will aid UCLA to victory.

Of course, this theory could be proven incorrect, but a UCLA victory would go a long way towards toning down the almost pagan idolatry of this basketball team.

designed TO STRETCH A MAN!

That's the new Initial Management Development Program at Southwestern Bell.

It's a tough one.

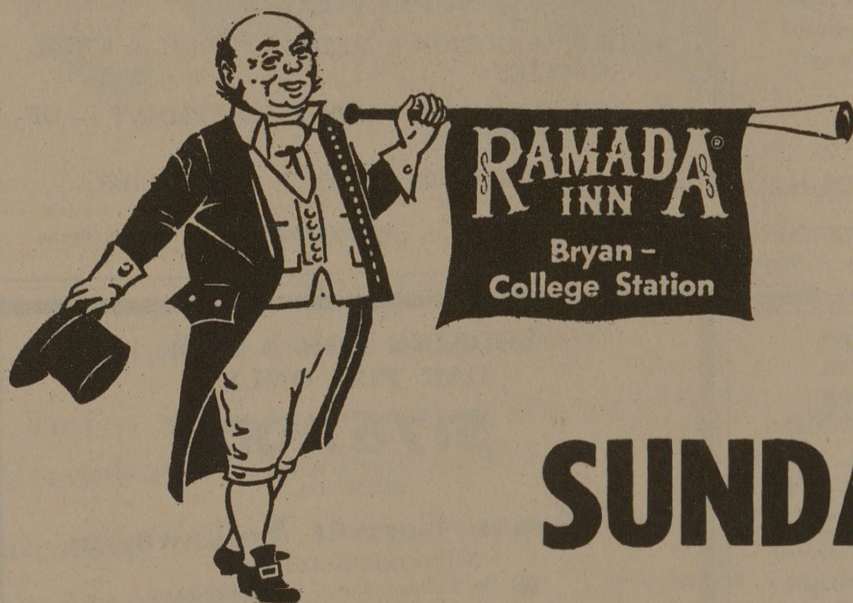

It's not designed for the man who's afraid to work, or afraid of responsibility.

None of this paper-shuffling, wear-out-the-seat-of-your-pants orientation business. Just plenty of mind-stretching, meaningful work from the very first day.

The job is custom-made—depending on your background and interests. You may work as an engineer, a plant foreman, a local manager. There is a variety of assignments, but a couple of things are for sure: You'll be supervising people, solving problems, running the job. And you'll be held accountable for your own success or failure.

Like we said, the Initial Management Development Program is a tough one. It's designed to stretch a man. If you feel up to it, make plans now to visit with a Southwestern Bell representative. He'll be on campus March 26-27, 1968, at the Placement Office.
