Demonstrations Spreading To High Schools

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Student demonstrations spreading from colleges to high schools and a strike by teachers in Maryland combined to keep thousands of young Americans from their classrooms Wednesday.

The entire 25,381 enrollment of New York's Columbia University, closed by a week-long student sit-in finally broken up by the police, idled another day away as the school administration decided on a further cooling-off period.

More than 700 Columbia students whom the police had ousted Tuesday from five university buildings faced charges of trespassing and other offenses. There was talk of a general student strike to back demands for the resignation of the university president, Dr. Grayson Kirk.

Taking their cue from the Columbia demonstrators, 22 students of the Stony Brook, N. Y. State University began a sit-in at the school business office, protesting the presence of county police on the campus. The police moved in after arresting 33 students on drug possession and sale charges in a January raid.

Defying a threat of wholesale suspensions, pupils—mostly Negroes—renewed sit-in demonstrations at four Cincinnati public high schools to protest disciplinary regulations. Police arrested about 100 for ignoring orders to disperse.

School Supt. Paul Miller already had announced that 1,400 pupils involved in sit-ins at six high schools Tuesday would be suspended at least 10 days.

Judge Benjamin Schwartz of the Hamilton County Juvenile Court backed Miller with an order placing all suspended pupils under house arrest. He said they could go out in public only if accompanied by a parent, and must be home by 9 p.m.

Brazos Residents May Participate In May 11 Contest

G. Rollie White Coliseum will be the May 11 site of the annual Brazos County power weight-lifting championships.

Contest Chairman Henry Heatherly, A&M mathematics instructor, said medals will be awarded to winners in seven classes. The top three "overall" weight lifters, he noted, will receive trophies.

Heatherly announced the contest is open to all Brazos County residents, including A&M students. He said rules of the Amateur Athletic Union will be followed.

The weigh-in is set for 1 p.m. May 11 in the coliseum locker room, with the contest to follow at 2 p.m. in the second floor weight room.
