

Maurer Attends Vet Symposium

Dr. Fred Maurer, associate dean of the Texas A&M University College of Veterinary Medicine, is participating in the Inter-American Symposium on Health Aspects of the International Movement of Animals this week in San Antonio.

Dr. Maurer will moderate a session dealing with "Health Aspects of International Movement of Exotic Animals" to be held on the afternoon of Aug. 30.

More than 30 original papers on health problems associated with importation and exportation of animals will be read and discussed. Sponsors are the Pan American Health Organization and the Conference of Public Health Veterinarians.

The three-day meeting is designed to provide an interchange among participants interested in research, diagnosis, food products and zoo animals. About 350 leaders from Latin America, Canada and the United States will gather for the meetings at the Sheraton-San Antonio Motor Inn.

Gosney Promoted To Lt. Colonel

Texas A&M graduate Robert R. Gosney of Fort Worth has been promoted to lieutenant colonel in the U. S. Army.

An Aggie football letterman and cadet first lieutenant in "B" Athletics in 1954, Colonel Gosney is a project officer of the Army Combat Developments command Aviation Agency at Fort Rucker, Ala.

The lieutenant colonel was stationed in Vietnam before assignment at Rucker. He holds 23 awards of the Air Medal, including one for heroism, and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Among the speakers will be Dr. George L. Mehren, former assistant secretary of agriculture and now executive director, Agribusiness Council, Inc.; Dr. Abraham Horwitz, director of the Pan American Health Organization; Dr. William P. Stewart, surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service; Dr. Rafael Moreno Valle, Minister of Health of Mexico; and Dr. Harold T. Vagtborg, president of the Southwest Foundation for Research and Education in San Antonio.

Symposium accommodations are limited because of the HemisFair in the Alamo City.

YOU SURE A WALL GOES HERE?
A&M construction workers seem to be somewhat puzzled about where the next wall should go in the new lounges in the Corps area. Work has been progressing on schedule and two of the student lounges should be ready by the opening of fall semester classes.

Transportation Conference Set

The Department of Transportation and Texas A&M will jointly sponsor the Eleventh Annual Transportation Conference at the University, March 27 and 28, 1969.

Secretary of Transportation Alan S. Boyd and Maj. Gen. John P. Doyle of the Texas A&M Texas Transportation Institute met in Washington to discuss the conference plans.

The conference theme, "Emergency Transportation," recognizes that in any national defense emergency, some degree of centralized national and regional control may be required. The conference will explore the needs, analyze proposed regulations and procedures, and recommend courses of action leading to improved national transportation preparedness.

"Industry, government and the research agencies should sit down together to work out effective emergency controls," said Secretary Boyd. "We must insure that our regulations and procedures are as simple and practicable as we can make them; the alternative is chaos at a time when we could least afford it."

Doyle, MacDonald Professor of Transportation at Texas A&M, will direct the workshop, working closely with the DOT Office of Emergency Transportation. The conference will be attended by transportation industry officials

Firearm Safety School Conducted

Area boys and girls will begin their training in firearms and hunter safety at 10:30 a.m., September 7, according to Sidney L. Loveless, National Rifle Association counselor. The school will continue through the succeeding two months at Pleasant Acres for those between the ages of 11 and 19.

This year's school marks the beginning of the 36th such school conducted by the Twin City Junior Rifle Club under the auspices of the National Rifle Association and YOU-TOMORROW, a non-profit educational corporation for the benefit of youth. Although emphasis will be placed on marksmanship and safety, the class will have an opportunity to fire the .22 shotgun on the Mosskett range at miniature clay pigeons thrown by foot operated traps. This firing is in addition to .22 rifle marksmanship training.

For the hunter there will be instruction in tenting, cooking and orienteering. Graduates of the school will receive certificates and will be eligible for selection to membership in the Twin City Junior Rifle Club Loveless said.

Rifles, ranges, texts, ammunition and instruction will be furnished. All the student need bring is a canteen of water and wear a long-sleeved garment. Chief instructor for the school will be Jim Durham, and he will be assisted by Jack Bowen and Jerry Mosley.

AstroFacts

It has been said that "if" is one of the biggest little words in the English language. But the way the Houston Astros have been going lately, this might be a pretty good time to combine a little forward and backward "what-iffing" where they're concerned.

Just about every Houston fan is aware of a couple of important things:

—The National League is going to divisional play in 1969.

—The Astros have been playing good, winning baseball under the managing of Harry Walker. (Through last Wednesday, they were 36-31 under Harry "The Hat.")

Combining those two items into the major point of this "what if" session:

Had the National League split into divisions at the same time that Walker became Houston's Manager (June 18), the Astros would be involved in a red-hot battle for the NL's Western Division championship.

The league's Western Division in 1969 will include Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Atlanta, Cincinnati and expansion club San Diego.

Since Walker took over the Astros, only Cincinnati has had a better winning percentage than Houston among the future Western Division Clubs. And the Reds' lead isn't enough to make them overconfident.

Cincinnati has a 35-26 record during the period for a winning percentage of .574. That would give them first place in such "what if" divisional alignments.

But Houston, with a 36-31 record (.537 percentage) over the same span, would be only two games off the Reds' pace. As the Giants would be in the divisional pennant battle, too, trailing by only three games.

Although it's impossible to figure a record for the incoming San Diego club, only Atlanta (14½ games off the pace) would be out of the running in such circumstances.

The Astros, apparently on the way to their best August in history, completed a three-game sweep of the Dodgers last Wednesday night. It gave Houston a winning streak of four games and meant that the Astros had been victorious in seven of the last eight, nine of 12, and 11 of 15 since August 9.

Had that divisional breakdown come on June 18, 1968, here is the way the standings would look:

NATIONAL LEAGUE WESTERN DIVISION
Team	W	L	Pct.
Cincinnati	35	26	.574
Houston	36	31	.537
San Francisco	32	29	.525
Atlanta	30	35	.461
Los Angeles	20	40	.333
San Diego	?	?	?
