

NEW YORK (AP)—A Columbia University official asked a unity committee Thursday to consider whether to revoke the status charter of the radical students for a Democratic Society.

The committee is composed of administrators, two faculty members and two students.

Revocation of the charter would mean the loss of all rights to university property, a spokesman said, and also that the university would not recognize student membership in SDS.

SDS members have led the efforts to cripple the 25,000-student university as the opening of the fall term approaches. Classes began Sept. 26. The militant group attacked the demonstrations last spring that paralyzed the Ivy League school.

The university's director of student interests, Irving de Koff, referred the charter issue to the committee, a university spokesman said.

DeKoff acted after about 150 militant students halted registration at the Morningside Heights campus Wednesday by blocking the doorway. The demonstrators washed briefly with about a dozen campus police although there were no injuries or arrests.

Registration resumed Thursday without incident.

The Wednesday demonstration led De Koff to suspend previously granted permission for a meeting of international student revolutionaries on campus. The gathering is being sponsored by SDS.

Donald McCoy, 37-year-old former real estate investor, and his daughter, Dana, 9, are unruffled by a suit against McCoy to name a conservator for his estate on grounds he wants to give his money to a Hippie colony he has set up at Rancho Olompali near Novato, Calif. McCoy's former father-in-law, Arthur Land, of Mill Valley, Calif., was named as temporary conservator of the $200,000 remaining of the $500,000 estate. (AP Wirephoto)

Grad Students Seek ACF Chess Partner For Computer

Two computer science graduate students, Rolf Smith and Frank Ceruti, are trying to locate a chess player with an American Chess Federation rating to match with an IBM computer at the Data Processing Center.

Smith and Ceruti want to test the skill of the chess-playing computer before it takes on a similar machine at Carnegie Tech in New York.

Smith said the specially-programmed 360 "plays well against amateurs, can make all the moves, but needs more practice."

Smith or Ceruti can be contacted in room 302, DPC.

Senior Council Considers War Memorial

The Senior Council organized Thursday night and discussed plans to dedicate a memorial park for the Aggie war dead since World War II.

Landis Cervenka, a senior in marketing, proposed the idea of the memorial. Cervenka said it would be possible to have two 37 mm anti-tank cannons brought up from Ft. Sam Houston in San Antonio at the expense of the U. S. Army.

"The cannons are presently situated around the flag pole of Fort Sam Houston," Cervenka noted. "I mentioned the possibility of using the cannons in a memorial for the Aggie war dead in all the conflicts since World War II, to a general at the post, who said we were welcome to have them."

"Also we have a chance that some 105mm cannons could be located. They would all be transported at the expense of the Army," said Cervenka.

Although plans are not definite, several locations have been proposed for the site of the memorial. The cannons and a plaque listing the war dead could be situated either in the Duncan area or in front of the Systems Administration Building.

The possibility that the location of the memorial would be offensive to the civilian students was raised. Because it was to honor the Aggie war dead, both former civilian students or cadets, the council agreed that the location was less important than the intent.

A FACE OF WAR

Minh, Former Viet Top Man, To Return Soon From Exile

SAIGON (AP)—The dizzying ups and downs of South Vietnamese politics have produced no more strange personality than the general known as Big Minh—an orchid lover and tennis player beloved by his countrymen.

Why they love Duong Van Minh is something of a mystery, particularly to Americans. But love him they do.

His record has question marks still being debated. He presided over the coup that ousted autocratic President Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963 and for the next three exhilarating months was South Vietnam's nominal chief of state.

His role in the coup, while decisive, was largely one of a well-liked major general who acted as chairman of the Military Council and went along with the boys.

In the next three months the jovial six-foot general placidly did practically nothing. These were days which Americans here recall as "the big disillusion."

Minh was looked upon as the father of a new revolution and hope was high among South Vietnamese, rich and poor alike.

But some Americans, while sharing in the hope, wanted Big Minh to take some concrete steps to make it real. By most evidence, he did little save play tennis and enjoy himself.

After three months his fellow officers ousted him in the first of a dismal series of coups. He shortly wound up in exile in Bangkok, Thailand, where he set about raising more orchids and sometimes receiving disgruntled friends from Saigon.

Minh now has been invited to come back to Saigon, his exile lifted by President Nguyen Van Thieu while the political temperature of the capital is noticeably on the rise.

Just when he might arrive.

however, is still in question. So is the political position he is to be given by Thieu.

The role being mentioned is one of almost unbelievable irony.

He is to be made, according to palace gossip, the president's senior advisor on political and military affairs.

This was the precise position he held in 1963 when Diem kicked him upstairs in fear of a coup.

Obviously, Thieu doesn't fear a repetition of history.

Highway Researchers Wrap Up 18-State, Two-Day Meet Here

Seeking to increase safety and efficiency of the highway, representatives of 18 states Wednesday ended a two-day meeting with researchers and other highway officials at Texas A&M University. They serve as a committee for diagnostic studies of highway visual communications systems.

The research which is estimated to cost approximately one quarter million dollars is supported by 18 state highway departments. The U. S. Bureau of Public Roads' Washington Office will provide technical surveillance of the work. The Texas Transportation Institute will conduct the research study in cooperation with the sponsoring state highway departments.

With F. J. Tamanini of the Bureau of Public Roads in Washington, D. C., serving as temporary chairman, the group elected A. M. White of the Mississippi State Highway Department as chairman and A. E. Johnson, Jr. of the Arkansas Department of Highways as vice chairman.

Dr. Neilon J. Rowan of the Texas Transportation Institute is the principal investigator of the diagnostic studies which represent a new approach to studying present visual communication systems for improvement to better accommodate motorists on highway facilities. Rowan served on a previous cooperative research endeavor which successfully produced criteria for safer highway sign supports. Dr. Don Woods of the TTI staff will serve as associate principal investigator.

In addition to the state representatives, other visitors and BPR officials from the Washington, D. C., headquarters and several regional offices attended the meeting.
