

We Still Object

The more the administration's no-political-candidate speaker policy is explained, the knottier a problem it presents. Two weeks ago in this space, we objected to the position that A&M's "involvement" could somehow hurt its chances for legislative appropriations. At that time, we were looking forward to last night's Student Senate meeting, to which President Rudder had just been invited, as a chance to get a direct and clearer explanation of this idea.

But the point emphasized by presidential assistant Joe Buser, standing in for Rudder at the meeting, was that the administration "plays by the rules" in giving strict interpretation to the legislature's warning that no state appropriations "shall be used for influencing the outcome of any election, or the passage or defeat of any legislative measure." Buser assured the Senate that this philosophy does not amount to a condemnation of the 95 state institutions that do not adhere so stringently to this point, but simply represents the Executive Committee's commitment to its principles.

Apparently, another of those the regrettable public-relations lapses referred to yesterday has muddled the situation. Senate Vice-President David Maddox's remark that this explanation had never been given during the Committee's hearing of the Senate resolution Oct. 7, and was being heard by Senators "for the first time," reflects the sort of failure to communicate which must be overcome if future student-administration relations are to be based on full mutual trust.

We do not mean to imply any questioning of the Executive Committee's integrity, either on our part or by the Senators.

But granting that the appropriations argument is secondary to the administration's dedication to honor in abiding by the letter of the law, we still question the validity of the administration's position. We're admittedly pretty callow, and it'll probably take us a while to view A&M's "unique situation" in the perspective of President Rudder and Joe Buser; but that consideration, sober and mature as it may be, can't completely overshadow our insistent memory of Senator Wayne Gosnell's query on the administration's emphasis of honor: "If the university's purpose is to serve its students, shouldn't students be the ones to define this 'honor'?"

ON OTHER CAMPUSES

By MONTY STANLEY
When tu's Daily Texan carried letters to the editor condemning SDS heckling at the Humphrey political thing, a staunch defender of accuracy in reporting wrote a letter of protest to the paper, saying "Not all SDS people present were disruptive." In fact, she went on to say that some SDSers didn't even come because they knew that "others planned to heckle." The height of injustice is being a democratic-minded SDS fellow labeled as "disruptive."

TWU is making plans for a bus to bring girls to the Bonfire. Costing $9 per ticket, the bus will begin the return trip to Denton at 2 a.m. and will "arrive at 6 a.m. in time for girls to make morning classes." This arrangement may or may not have something to do with the response, which "has been slight so far."

***
At Del Mar College in Corpus Christi, biology is being offered as audio-lab course in hopes of "more individualized instruction." The course will be run somewhat on the basis of A&M's language labs, with only one hour in which students actually gather as a class assembly.

***
Thursday night at East Texas State is Penny-a-Minute Night for coeds. This means that the girls can stay out up to one hour later than the regular 10:30 curfew, provided that they present 60 cents at the door upon their return.

***
Last Friday afternoon, SMU's Kappa Alpha Thetas and Tri Deltas had a "Pansy Picnic," where everyone went to "eat dinner and watch pumpkin carving contests between big and little sisters."

At Tarleton, $10 will get you enrollment into a course called "The Keys To Success." Says its teacher, Dr. Barnes, "With this course, students may be among that five per cent" of people in the United States rated as successful. The extracurricular course's price is a small one to pay, according to Barnes, because "It certainly is easier to live with success than without it."

From Tech's University Daily we learn that all motels were full, and had been for "several weeks," before their homecoming. Furthermore, the article stated, anyone wishing to reserve rooms for a future home game had better get with it quickly, as there are presently only a few rooms available. Any Aggie who has tried later than January to get reservations for a home game weekend would agree that we should only be so lucky as to have "only a few rooms left." What we need here is a 200-unit weekend Ramada that converts on Monday mornings to a coffee shop without a juke box.
