Prof Donates 300 Volumes To Library

More than 300 books have been contributed to the A&M Library by Dr. Howard G. Applegate, plant sciences faculty member since 1963.

The volumes have been incorporated into the library's science and special collections, noted Dr. James P. Dyke, director.

Most of the volumes are in the science collection and deal with anthropology and the history of science.

The gift included 75 books issued by Heritage Press of New York. Trade edition reprints of works originally issued by the Limited Editions Club, the Heritage volumes are noted examples of good book design, printing and binding.

Woodcut illustrations, covers designed from family shields, colorful illumination and classic typography are typified by the Applegate special collections contributions.

Notable volumes include the "Coronation Edition" of "The Faerie Queene," Whitman's "Leaves of Grass," "The Decameron" written by Giovanni Boccaccio in the 14th century and W. H. Prescott's "A History of the Conquest of Mexico," according to Mrs. Evelyn M. King, special collections librarian.

Interviews will begin Tuesday by the selection committee consisting of Robert Boone, director of the Singing Cadets; Marvin Tate, representative from the Athletic Department; Carter, committee chairman; Benny Sims, Memorial Student Center Council and Directorate president; Hector Gutierrez, Corps commander; Bill Youngkin, head yell leader; and David Wilks, Civilian Student Council president.

On Wednesday, the candidates will model a sports ensemble and an outfit they would wear for a football game date. The winner will be announced after the modeling.

Although A&M previously decided to participate in the contest for NCAA "College Football Centennial Queen," the selection committee may decide not to enter the contest if none of the applicants has the right qualifications.

AF Deadline Nears On 4 Year Grants

High school seniors will be notified until Nov. 15 to apply with Air University Air Force ROTC for four-year financial assistance grants for the 1969-70 school year.

AFROTC headquarters has announced that 500 grants will be awarded to students who will enter the freshman year of college in September, 1969.

Each grant provides full payment of tuition, lab fees, textbook allowance and a non-taxable $50 per month subsistence payment. Students applying must agree to enter the AFROTC program in a flying category (pilot or navigator) and enter an Air Force training program upon graduation.

materialize except for isolated incidents. About 350 youths, a mere handful compared with the crowds assembled for the Democratic National Convention, marched in an orderly way through Chicago's loop and then disbanded.

In Newark, N. J., police used their billy clubs to contain a demonstration of about 200 persons after fighting broke out. Two were arrested.

In New York, after a Union Square rally, the protestors invaded the midtown area and 70 were arrested. In Washington 100 demonstrators near the White House were booked by police.

Pilots Complete Their Assignments

Air Force officers who studied here have recently completed major assignments.

Maj. Carlos Gonzales of Brownsville finished his 201st and final combat mission in Vietnam and Capt. Donald A. Cunningham of Lufkin participated in the launch of the 11th Titan III-C from Cape Kennedy.

An F-4 Phantom pilot with the 558th Tactical Fighter Squadron, Cam Ranh Bay, Gonzales will be reassigned as an instructor pilot at Davis Monthan AFB, Ariz. The 1954 A&M graduate flew close air support for ground troops and destroyed enemy routes and fortifications in North Vietnam's southern panhandle. He studied marketing and was a Squadron 7 cadet.

Cunningham completed mechanical engineering degree work in 1958 and acquired the master's at Stanford. The successful rocket launch placed four experimental satellites in orbit. The mission was part of the Department of Defense Space Experiments Support Program managed by Air Force Systems Command at Los Angeles.

The captain is a mechanical engineer in the Titan III Space Experiments Flight Support Division. In this position, Cunningham helps managed development of satellites for Air Force research and development flights.

He was a Sixth Group Staff cadet major and executive officer in the Corps, a Distinguished Student and Distinguished Military Student.
