

Robert E. (Bob) Roepke, 1961 graduate, was elected Wednesday to head the Brazos County A&M Club in 1969. He succeeds Joe Buser in the presidency.

Secretary-treasurer this year, Roepke also has served on the 300-member club's board of directors. He is manager of Randy Sims Barbecue House.

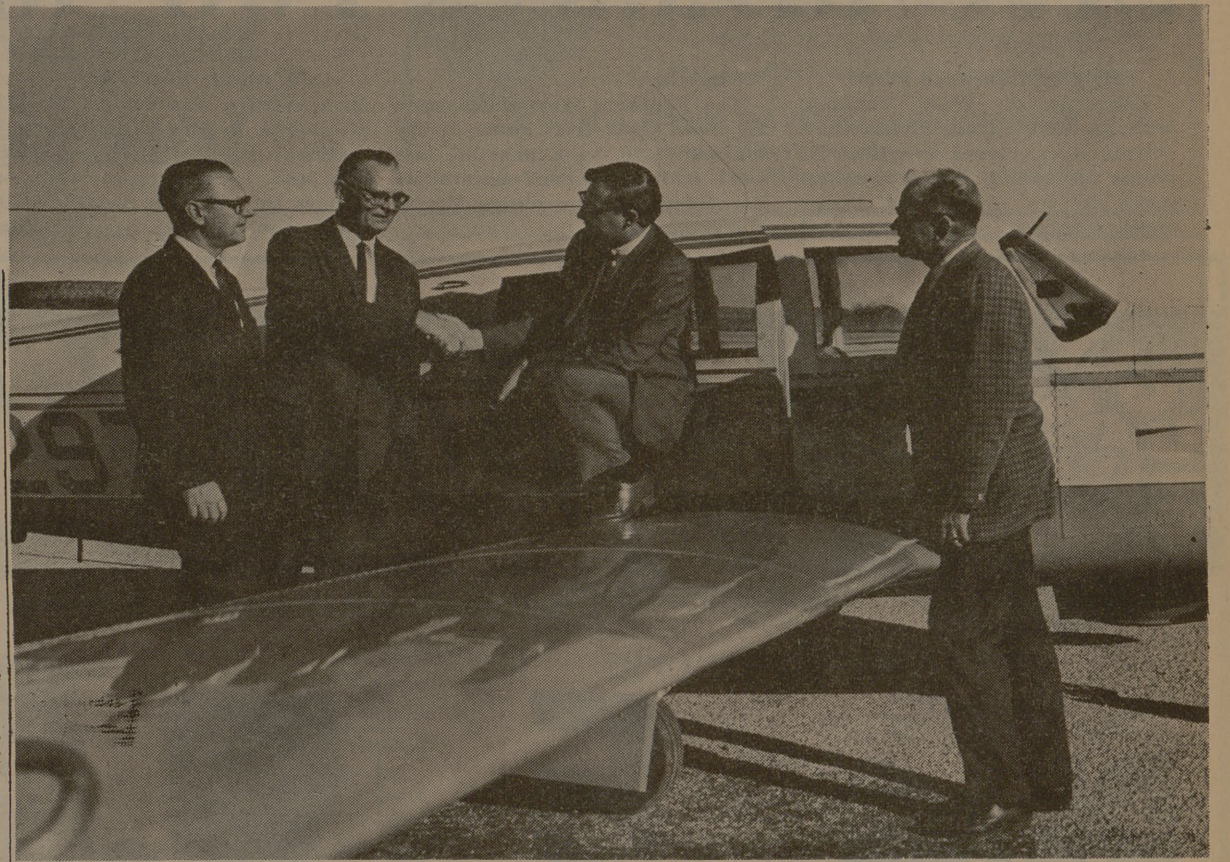

Serving with Roepke next year will be Jim Forehand, first vice president (activities); James Stegall, second vice president (high school relations); Bob Galloway, secretary-treasurer; and John Vittrup, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Newly elected members to the nine-man club board are Hoy

Richards, former first vice president; Connie Eckard and Bob Lynd. They will serve with Lowell Jones, Cecil Ryan and W. T. Riedel, whose terms expire next December, and Jack Runkles, John Thomas and Everett Glazener, serving until December, 1970.

The club restructured its executive offices to coincide with Association of Former Student organization and added two new offices, vice presidents for community relations and public relations. Elected to the posts were Buser, outgoing president, and John West, respectively.

The club meets the third Wednesday of each month.

FLYING START TOWARD TEACHING

George N. Johnson (second from left), 1937 geology graduate, started a special university program last fall and will be a certified high school teacher next fall. The accelerated accomplishment will largely be the result of work by Junction schools Superintendent Charles L. Champion (left) and S. T. Rimes, Junction High principal (right). Dr. Roger L. Harrell is one of the A&M faculty members who arranged Johnson's curriculum through Jamison Law provision.

Accelerated A&M Program Provides Needed Teachers

A consulting geologist with 34 years experience following graduation from here and a University of Texas at Austin social studies graduate are taking accelerated routes here to become Texas public school teachers.

Their work in a program founded on the recently enacted Jamison Law will short cut the usually lengthy state teacher certification process.

It will put George N. Johnson and Mrs. Julia Ellis in teaching in a year. Neither had education courses in their undergraduate degree work.

The Jamison Law (House Bill 644 enacted in 1967) was designed by Congressman Alonzo Jamison to speed up teacher preparation and certification of specially selected intelligent, mature, well-educated and concerned persons who want to qualify to teach in Texas, noted Liberal Arts Dean Frank Hubert.

The special program gives credit for previous work and reduces the education course load required by the state for prospective teachers to become certified. It trims the time required from a minimum of two years to one.

"Acceleration is not at the expense of quality," pointed out education professor Dr. Roger L. Harrell. He said hundreds of top college graduates in fields other than education want to enter teaching.

"In the past, their interest waned when they found out it would take at least two years of college work to earn a certificate. Now it can be accomplished in a year," Harrell added.

Special programs based on applicant's previous degree work are arranged by Dr. William H. Graves Jr., Harrell and a faculty member appointed by the Council on Teacher Education coordinator Dr. Earl H. Knebel. The individual's program requires approval of the Council and TEA.

Johnson and Mrs. Ellis will complete the special program next August, largely due to cooperation of school officials where they are doing their year of internship teaching.

Superintendent Charles L. Champion and S. T. Rimes, high school principal at Junction where Johnson is in internship, are very helpful, Harrell credited.

TSEA Chapter Elects New Officers

The A&M chapter of the Texas Student Education Association recently elected new officers for the coming year.

They include Shirley Nichols of Caldwell, president; Milton Reichel of Houston, vice-president; Jean Lowery of Carlsbad, N. M., treasurer; Michael Plate of Bayton, secretary, and Allen Jozwiak of Sealy and Robin Rice of Bryan, publicity co-chairmen.

Six delegates from the chapter will attend the 1969 TSEA state convention Feb. 27-March 1 at the Texas Hotel in Fort Worth, according to Rice.
