Campus Disruption Bill Passed By Senate, 31-0

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — Senators Tuesday passed 31-0 and returned to the House a bill making it a crime to take part in a violent disruption of a school or college campus.

Several amendments were added to the House-passed bill, which the House must either accept or reject. Rejection of the amendments would require appointment of a conference committee to iron out the House-Senate differences.

SENATE approval of the campus disorders bill came after the addition of several amendments. One amendment would lower the minimum fine from $25 to $1, allowing less serious offenders to be tried in justice court rather than be charged in county court.

Retained is the $200 maximum fine and possible jail terms of 10 days to six months. Also added was a provision incorporating a recent U. S. Supreme Court decision upholding the right to peaceful protest on campus.

Sen. A. R. Schwartz, Galveston, failed in an attempt to remove all jail punishment from the bill. Although he said the measure was "about as necessary as a third shoe," Schwartz voted for the bill.

"We must and will protect the rights of campus dissenters and the campus protesters to do so peacefully, but at the same time, we must protect the rights of other students and the people of Texas. The bill will help to do so," said Sen. Mike McKeel, Dallas.

Bill To Lower Voting Age Out Of Committee

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate committee approved today a proposal lowering the voting ages from 21 to 19. The same committee previously approved a measure dropping the age to 18 so both are now ready for floor debate.

In all, there are five proposed constitutional amendments which would lower the voting age to either 18 or 19.

Sen. Ronald Bridges of Corpus Christi gave two main reasons for setting 19, rather than 18, as the voting age:

• "If the decision to lower the voting age to 19 is later shown to be still too high a voting age, the mistake can be corrected. But if the decision to lower the voting age to 18 is later felt to be a mistake, nothing, as a practical matter, can be done about it."

• 81 per cent of the 18-year-olds are still in high school, but only 22 per cent of 19-year-olds are, according to statistics on the last full school year, and youths out of high school generally are more mature—have "cut the apron strings so to speak."

Bridges estimated that lowering the voting age to 18 would raise potential voters in 1970 by 672,696 and by lowering the age to 19 would bring in 451,174 more potential voters.

About half would be expected to vote, he said.

There was no objection from the Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee to the proposal.

Army ROTC Gives 29 DMS

A&M has added 29 more Distinguished Military Students in its Army ROTC program, Col. Jim H. McCoy announced.

Fifty-five DMS cadets were designated last fall, bringing the year's total to 84.

Seniors accorded the honor have demonstrated leadership ability, rank in the upper third of military science, the upper half of their academic field and were recommended by summer camp commander.

Maintaining the level qualifies the cadet for Distinguished Military Graduate designation and a Regular Army commission.

Spring semester recipients include Louis W. Adams III of Kingsville; Michael B. Benton and Allen C. Gunter, Dallas; Michael H. Bishop, Beverly E. Davis III, John C. Johnson, Robert E. Nickle, William S. Pitman, Charles F. Schwab Jr. and James D. Williams, San Antonio.

Also, James H. Cartwright, Decatur; Michael E. Caudle, Lindale; Bernard P. Dawson, Wichita Falls; Glenn R. Dresner, Marlin; Michael F. Emerson, Kalua, Hawaii; William D. Green Jr., Frisco; James D. Herring, Shreveport, La.; Stephen A. Holditch, Tyler; Lynn R. Irby, Irving; Robert H. Johnson, Paris.

In addition, William B. Jones, St. Davids Church, Va.; Arthur B. Lane, Houston; Lawrence A. Lippke, Yorktown; George C. Magby, Corpus Christi; Michael S. Meharg, Bartlesville, Okla.; James E. Mudd, Yoakum; Joseph P. Pettibon, Castroville; George H. Rau, Angleton, and Sherman D. Roberts, Bryan.

Students, Lawmakers Plan Better Communications

Meetings, Polls May Resolve Issues: Carter

By TONY HUDDLESTON
A&M student leaders met Tuesday with several members of the state legislature to plan better lines of communication between the two groups, according to Bill Carter, Student Senate President.

Accompanying Carter to Austin were David Wilks, Civilian Student Council President and Garland Clark, deputy corps commander. The three-man team met with nine former A&M students-turned-legislators at an informal luncheon to discuss ideas of better communication.

"Better communications will enable the legislature to get students' opinions about issues through polls conducted by the student governments," Wilks said.

ANOTHER purpose of a definite communication link Carter stressed to the legislators, "was that the A&M student government was trying to remedy the problems of its students by talking directly to the legislators, rather than by using violent means of protest common to other campuses."

The meeting, arranged by State Rep. Bill Prenal of College Station, allowed the leaders to give their opinions and the general opinion of the A&M student body on certain issues now facing the legislature, Wilks said.

A problem stressed was the lowering of the voting age to 18, which the student leaders said the majority of the student body at A&M favor, Wilks asserted.

LIQUOR-BY-the-drink was also discussed. Wilks said that the leaders noted that the majority of students favored this resolution.

On the issue of doubling the tuition, the student leaders said that most of the student body was against the increase, Wilks added.

Parimutuel betting on horse racing was another issue discussed with the legislators. Wilks said the student leaders agreed that the student body was divided equally on this issue.

"At the present time, I do not believe polls will be taken except when the bills need the support to pass or fail. The state legislature will probably use these polls to get student opinions on problems that concern them," Wilks pointed out.

Carter and David Maddox, Student Senate vice president, will testify before a House committee March 18 on the voting age issue.

MAKING WAY FOR THE NEW

Construction workers bulldoze the remains of one of the old College View apartment units, razed to make way for new facilities for married students. Seven old units containing 56 apartments will be demolished and replaced with seven new air-conditioned units. The new units will include 84 apartments similar to those in the Hensel area, but larger.

University Regs Revisions To Be Key Senate Issue

By TOM CURL
Student-proposed revisions of the university regulations governing student life will be discussed and possibly decided upon at the Student Senate meeting Thursday night.

The proposed changes, as adopted by the Student Senate, will go to the University Regulations Commission for final approval. Members of the administration group include Senate President Bill Carter.

"This is the first year the students have had a voice in making the regulations," said Senator Collier Watson, chairman of the four-man subcommittee that began study of the "blue book" in October. Other members are Fred Magee, Tom Fitzhugh and Gary Anderson.

MOST OF the changes were in the form of rewording existing sections to update the book and enumerate student rights and responsibilities. However, some of the proposed changes would significantly alter student life at A&M.

Perhaps the most unusual proposal concerns the presence of women in men's dormitories. Under present rules, women are allowed in the dormitories only on special occasions approved by the commandant of the Corps of Cadets or the director of the Department of Student Affairs. The subcommittee proposes to allow women in the dormitories from 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. on weekends in addition to the special occasions already permitted.

"It's the idea of getting a few more privileges involving women," Magee explained.

"IT ALL goes back to the belief that everybody at A&M is supposedly a little more mature than other people our age," he added. Watson said that the subcommittee was not in complete agreement on the issue.

Another suggestion of the group is revision of the rule concerning search of dormitory rooms. The rule now states that search can be made by a university official in the presence of a cadet commander or resident adviser. The group proposes that search only be conducted in the presence of at least one occupant of the room.

"This protects both the student and the university from accusations," Watson pointed out.

A third proposal involves university disciplinary action for students in violation of drug and liquor laws. Under the present rules, any student violating the Texas Liquor Control Act or the Federal Narcotics Law is subject to suspension. The subcommittee suggests that mention of the liquor law be deleted and the rule be retained concerning the drug laws.

"WE REALIZE this is judgment of the gravity of a crime, but the violation of the narcotics act generates instant publicity that might be bad for A&M; whereas a minor possession (of alcohol) charge isn't that bad," Watson explained.

Another proposal which will probably draw much Senate discussion is the suggestion that class officers must be "academically" classified with their respective classes at election time or at the beginning of the year for which they are elected. Under the present rules, there may be a conflict in the case of Corps members who are academically in one class and in another class based on semesters of ROTC completed.

3,650 Tickets Left For Game With Trinity Saturday

Tickets for the A&M-Trinity game Saturday went on sale Tuesday at the G. Rollie White Coliseum ticket window, announced Bill Youngkin, head yell leader.

"We have 4,000 tickets allotted to us," Youngkin said, "and so far only 350 have been sold. If this keeps up, the Aggie Band and their dates will outnumber the rest of the student body attending the game."

"Last night at the TCU game, people were calling us 'poor Aggies,'" Youngkin continued. "If we don't go out and buy tickets for the game to support the team, we deserve the name because we are poor."

"Some people seem content to sit at home and watch the game on television instead of taking the time to drive to Fort Worth and be there in person."

Harry Gillam, station manager for KBTX-TV in Bryan, said yesterday that the Daniel-Meyer Coliseum 9 p.m. game could very well not be televised.

"We have asked them (the Television Sports Network) to let us clear it," Gillam said. "However, unless the game is sold out 48 hours before game time, we won't be allowed to carry it. We want to carry it, and are working to see if we can."

"The team has really been putting out for us all this year," Youngkin concluded, "and it's really a shame we won't put out for them when our turn comes. I really hope everyone will get to the game that possibly can."

Strongest Man' To Perform Here

Paul Anderson, reputed to be the "world's strongest man," appears on the A&M campus March 13, Jerry Campbell, President of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, announced Tuesday.

Tickets for the 7:30 p. m. program in Guion Hall are free, Campbell noted, and are available at the Athletic Business Office in G. Rollie White Coliseum and at banks in the Bryan-College Station area.

"I want to point out to people that the ticket, while free, is necessary to get in," Campbell commented. "We only have a seating capacity of 1,500. Those without tickets will be turned away."

"During the program, Anderson will lift a platform with eight people on it, weighing well over 2,000 pounds," Campbell continued. "He will probably take a 10-penny nail and slam it through two one-inch pine boards with his bare hands. He will also demonstrate some regular weight lifting."

Appearing with Anderson, Campbell noted, will be Ray Hildebrand, a pop singer and FCA national staff member, who wrote and recorded "Hey, Paula" while Hildebrand is a former college basketball player, having played at Navarro Junior College and Howard Payne, both in Texas.

Anderson, after graduating from high school, attended Furman University in South Carolina on one of many football scholarship offers. While there, he became interested in weightlifting.

At the outset, he was able to lift more weight than anyone in the history of the school and, after a few weeks of training, he was breaking world records that had stood for over 30 years.

WORLD'S STRONGEST MAN
Appearing here March 13 in Guion Hall will be Paul Anderson, a weightlifter who hammers nails with his bare hands. Tickets for the 7:30 p. m. program are free, but must be obtained in advance from the Athletic Business Office in G. Rollie White Coliseum.

Marriage Usually Indicates Only Infatuation: Hamilton

By DAVE BERRY
At marriage a couple doesn't generally know each other well enough to be in love; for this reason marriage usually indicates only infatuation.

So spoke Dr. Sidney Hamilton last night at the first of a series of YMCA-sponsored marriage forums here. Dr. Hamilton, a professional marriage counselor, teaches courses in mental testing, clinical and marital psychology, adolescent development, and guidance at North Texas State University.

"As knowledge of the mate grows, infatuation becomes love. Infatuation, then, is the springboard to love in later marriage. Thus, a happily married couple is more in love after ten years of marriage than it is after five years of marriage," Dr. Hamilton said.

"Infatuation, which is at one end of the scale, is still a duality; love, at the other end, is a oneness. As infatuation becomes love, therefore, a re-orientation of personalities must occur."

Dr. Hamilton spoke next on love as opposed to sex.

"Love is not as necessary as sex," he said. "Note that love is a fairly recent development in history; even today there are societies which are without this emotion.

"Formerly, man was able to tender all the ingredients of love (respect, envy, trust, etc.) on other men. Women served only to satisfy the sex urge and to bear children," he said.

Dr. Hamilton explained that sex is an innate biological urge which appears without the aid of external factors. Because the sex urge is an inborn characteristic, it did not at first have any personal meaning to man.

"Like any other biological system in man, the sexual system is not bad. The sex urge is bad only when it controls man," he said.

"So often today teenagers confuse sex with love. Sex is an expression of love; if improperly used, sex can lead to hate instead of love. Sex can sustain courtship but not marriage."

"True love is giving. It is giving of yourself in love for the return of happiness in love," he said.
