Facilities to train U. S. astronauts for the first extraterrestrial landing were toured this week by 25 A&M Air Force ROTC cadets.

The junior Professional Officer Course cadets viewed three key training sites of NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center and mission control, where the Apollo 10 flight was being simulated near Houston.

May 18 is fixed as the date of the second circumlunar Apollo flight. Apollo 10 will take Col. Thomas P. Stafford, Cdr. John W. Young and Cdr. Eugene Cernan into lunar orbit 69 miles

During the 63-hour orbit, Stafford and Cernan will detach the Apollo lunar module and descend to 50,000 feet above the lunar ited. terrain. Apollo 11 is expected to land men on the moon this sum-

DURING the three-hour tour, cadets viewed the computer controlled LM landing simulator, Apollo command module flight simulator and docking simulator.

They also visited the center museum where space vehicles and equipment of Mercury, Gemini and Apollo missions are exhib-

The tour would normally have included stops at the centrifuge and moon surface mockup, but these were in use. Bob Watson of the NASA public relations division conducted the tour.

"This visit to the center enhances studies of the cadets," explained Air Force Col. Vernon L. Head, professor of aerospace studies. He explained the juniors are studying space and space systems.

Cadets were accompanied by Majors Charles Haney, Eugene Gray and Hal Wandry of the instructor detachment.

SDS Strike Fizzles In Austin

AUSTIN (AP)-A student strike called by the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) at the University of Texas at Austin failed to gain substantial support

SDS had urged students to boycott classes to attend outdoor discussion sessions on subjects ranging from left wing politics to cinema and art, but only about 150 persons attended the "critical university" classes. The university has more than 30,000 stu-

Waterhouse said he still hoped the "critical university" could produce a "unified student group" to back the SDS in its efforts to reverse a decision by the Texas-Austin administration to deny use of the student union building for the SDS national council meeting

A federal district court refused an SDS request Monday that the university be forced to open the student union to the SDS meet-

The city also refused use of an auditorium in east Austin for the SDS meeting.

Casey Recognized For FDT Work

Michael E. Casey of Houston, senior adviser of the Fish Drill Team, has been awarded A&M's Association of Military Colleges and Schools medal.

In making the presentation, President Earl Rudder said the recognition is deserved in view of the Fish Drill Team's contributions.

The award will be made annually to the team's senior adviser. He is responsible with six other members of the upperclass cadre for developing and
