

Annella wright

an end-of-the-year tribute

Aggie Sweetheart Annella Wright gets practical experience for her special Education major by working summers as an assistant at the Mexia State School in her home town. The school, one of several state-supported institutions designed to educate mentally retarded children and adults, is unique in that it is on the site of a former camp for German prisoners of war during World War II. Several of the POW camp buildings, including the gymnasium where Annella helps with some of the school's physical-therapy work, are still standing.

Above: Annella and another assistant twirl a jump-rope for one of the school's students. Recreation includes group dancing and playground activities.

Left: On a recent visit to the school, Annella is greeted enthusiastically by some of the women with whom she has worked in past summers. She is "Mama" to all the Mexia School students—even those who are chronologically old enough to be her mother or grandmother.
