Engineering

College of Engineering faculty awards for outstanding achievement have been presented to six senior engineering students, announced Dr. R. R. Davison, chemical engineering professor and chairman of the selection committee. Plaques went to John C. Abshier, Paul M. Mebane, and Joe R. Tillerson, of the Aerospace Engineering Department, and to Charles W. Gilcand, Arthur Bolton Lane, and Bobby Lee Ulich, of the Electrical Engineering Department. The outstanding students were selected on the basis of grades and achievement in all phases of university activities, Davison said. He added that most of the young men earned a major part of their support while at A&M.

TOP STUDENTS

Science

The College of Science honored nine outstanding seniors with eight receiving Faculty Achievement Awards. The special awards ceremony singled out biology majors Guy G. Garrett of Marlin and Howard L. Huddleston of Houston; mathematics majors Mrs. Randy L. Duhon of Houston, Mrs. Barbara S. Mobley of College Station, and David M. Scott of Port Neches; and physics majors Norman D. Gabtitzsch of Brownsville, John R. Hensley of San Antonio, and Roderick D. Stonedale of Houston. The eight students received certificates recognizing their achievement for academic excellence and extra-curricular participation. "The honorees were chosen because of their scholastic accomplishments and contributions to improvements in student activities," said Assistant Dean John B. Beckham, who presented the awards. Louis E. Walker Jr., a pre-med-chemistry major from Karnack, was awarded a copy of the Merck Index from Merck and Co. Inc. of New Jersey as the outstanding senior in chemistry.

Ag Economics And Sociology

Five outstanding students have been honored with awards by the Agricultural Economics and Sociology Department. The C. E. Bowles Award went to two students—Kenneth Graeber of Brenham and Wayne Jordan of Art. It was Graeber's second time to receive the honor. Bowles was a farm cooperative leader in Texas. He was secretary of the Plains Cotton Cooperative Association in Lubbock at the time of his death in 1967. James E. Mudd of Yoakum received the J. Wheeler Barger Award as the outstanding senior in the Department of Agricultural Economics and Sociology. The Wall Street Journal Student Achievement Award went to Howard D. Hicks of Bandera as the top senior in agricultural administration.

There were two recipients of the Dan Russell Award—Jimmy Brown of Bryan and Robert S. Sebesta of Caldwell. Russell was a long-time professor of sociology and is now retired in College Station. Bill Carter of Decatur, president of the Student Senate, was given the Department Head Award as the senior student who has made the greatest improvement since his freshman year. Jerry Walter Moody of Amarillo also was honored as recipient of the Texas Bankers Association Scholarship. The award was made during A&M's annual Farm and Ranch Credit School for Commercial Bankers earlier in the year. Four students received awards presented on behalf of the Sociology faculty by Dr. R. L. Skrabank. Gerald H. Rapp of Galveston received the Outstanding Senior in Sociology Award, and Carroll Lee Crawley of Houston received the Outstanding Junior in Sociology Award. Co-recipients of the Daniel Russell Sociology Scholarship Award were Robert S. Sebesta of College Station and Jimmy R. Brown of Bryan.

Food Director Asks For Return Of "Borrowed" Knives, Forks

If Aggies will return the knives, forks and spoons "borrowed" since last semester, food service personnel would be able to serve the 2,600-member Corps of Cadets without using new silver. "We know there are enough knives, forks and spoons missing to serve nearly 3,000 students," said Col. Fred W. Dollar, Food Service Director. "And that is a conservative estimate."

Pointing out an exact count of items taken from A&M dining halls will be made at the end of the semester, Dollar said it is already obvious $15,000 worth of eating utensils has been taken during the fall and spring semesters. Students short change themselves, he added, since "we could serve them a better meal — more steaks for example — if they didn't have to pay the loss themselves. This is their money that is buying these items," he said. He admitted it is a small minority that steal but added it hurts all students. "We're not interested in prosecuting," he said, "just in having things back."

Adjunct Schedules Summer Sessions

A&M's Adjunct at Junction will open its first summer session June 2. William J. Dobson, A&M biology professor and adjunct director, said the camp will open with 175 students. The first of two summer sessions will continue through July 11. The second session will be held July 14 to Aug. 22. The adjunct is a summer program for freshmen who can "use a bit more help" in making the transition between high school and college which is often difficult for many students, Dobson added. He pointed out the summer program includes special study, counseling and guidance as well as physical fitness. The primary aim, however, is study with instructors offering personal help to students.
