

JIM AND FRIEND Jim Johnson exhibits a Peregrine falcon found seven months ago with a broken wing. It was discovered by a friend, Sandy Hurwitz of Trinity University, San Antonio. It was placed in an A&M sound chamber for six weeks while its wing healed.

Aggie Falconer Teaches Fowling To Flying Friends

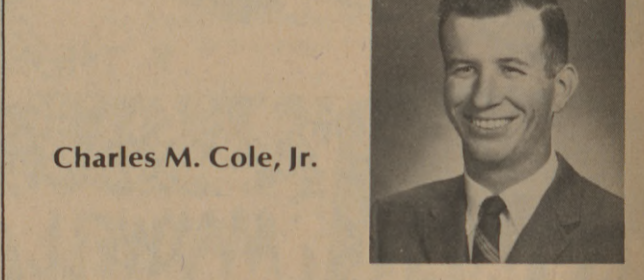

When it comes to veterinarians having their own special interests among animals and fowl, Jim Johnson of Midland is no exception. The Texas Aggie, who is wrapping up his final semester to graduate into the veterinarian ranks in August, follows the ancient sport of fowling with hawks. At 24, Johnson is a veteran falconer. His experience in handling the flying hunters who usually plunge down on their prey from above pre-dates his teenage years.

Since weight is so important, Johnson said, falcons must be "diet conscious"—whether they are boy or girl falcons. "The falcon is trained through his stomach," he stressed, explaining they hand from a "conditioned response." The birds are fed a specific amount of beef, he added. To change the diet, or total content, they receive "washed beef."

Playmates Aplenty For Aggies' Kids

One thing married students living in Texas A&M University-owned apartments don't have to worry about is finding playmates for their children. Calvin E. Moore, manager of the student housing, reports there are about 363 children of all ages living with their student parents in the 720 university apartments. Moore said the Student Apartment Council conducted a door-to-door survey in May, but he feels the results are not accurate. "The children count could almost change from day-to-day," Moore declared. "The survey figures are close, but we have had graduation and some new babies."

Teens Get Chance For Serious Acting

Teenagers register June 9 at Texas A&M for the Premiere Players, summer stock company which will produce William Sarrayan's "The Cave Dwellers" and "Visit To A Small Planet" by Gore Vidal. The Premiere Players, in their fourth season as a program of the theater arts section of A&M's English Department, provides 14 to 18-year-olds the opportunity to do serious theater work, noted C. K. Esten, section director. Rehearsals and work sessions three days per week also will include informal lectures covering theater arts topics such as acting, stage craft, lighting, directing and theater history.
