

Astros Host Expos In 'Biggest Home Stand'

There will be special added attractions for each of the Houston Astros games with Rusty Staub and the Montreal Expos this weekend in the Astrodome in the annual "Louisiana Days" celebration.

Friday night, August 8, will be "Be a Manager Night" when all youngsters will receive free the new baseball game called "Be A Manager."

Al Hirt, the famous trumpet player from New Orleans, will present a pre-game concert starting at 6:45 p.m. Saturday night, August 9. The show is included in the price of the baseball ticket. Sunday's 2:00 p.m. game will be preceded by a college all-star game. Some of the leading collegiate baseball players in the country, who have been performing in the College Invitational League, will play a five-inning exhibition game, starting at 12:30 p.m. Sunday will also be "Family Day" with all youngsters, 14 or under and accompanied by a parent, receiving a one dollar reduction on box and reserved seats.

The probable pitching rotation for the Astro-Expo series is as follows:

Friday—Don Wilson vs. Mike Wegener

Saturday—Larry Dierker vs. Bill Stoneman

Sunday—Tom Griffin vs. Howie Reed

The Montreal series is the middle series of a crucial nine-game home stand that includes three night games with Lippy Le Durocher's Chicago Cubs on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 4, 5 and 6. The amazing New York Mets close out the home stand with night games Monday, August 17, Tuesday, August 18 and Wednesday, August 19. Tickets to these and all future Astro home games may be obtained daily at the Astrodome.

One Student Here For 'Winter' School

Most students at Texas A&M are attending summer school, but one is here for "winter school."

Angelica Ambrogi of Sao Paulo, Brazil, left her native country in June to start the eight-week National Science Foundation Summer Institute in Chemistry. June, July and August are winter months in Brazil.

Miss Ambrogi is a chemistry teacher at Colégio Estadual de Sao Paulo, a public high school, and also a member of the Teacher Training Center, University of Sao Paulo.

She is attending Texas A&M under a NSF grant to learn the CHEM-Study method of chemistry teaching. CHEM-Study is the coined name for the chemical material study program started 10 years ago in California, according to her teacher and institute director, Dr. Fred Sicilio.

Although Miss Ambrogi has traveled in other American countries, this is her first visit to North America.

She finds the United States very interesting.

"I understand the professors because they are talking the chemistry language," she said. "But I have trouble understanding outside conversations." Miss Ambrogi said her English has improved, however, and she finds it easier to understand almost every day.

She taught herself the CHEM-Study method and has been one of the teacher trainers responsible for teaching other Brazilian teachers the new method.

"In comparing what we do at the training center, I find we are working with the same course that is being taught here," she stated.

Public school education in Brazil is different than in America.

She pointed out that Brazilian students receive three years of chemistry, physics and math in high school. She said it cannot be compared to United States training because most of Brazil's teenagers must have this concentrated study in absence of college training.

"The Brazil school year is from August to December and March to June," she explained. Educational programs are being improved in the country and emphasis is being placed in providing more education.

Sao Paulo is 40 miles from the Atlantic coast and has a population of six million people, she noted.

A&M's training is very important to her.

"I now have some background lectures to apply to our lectures," she said. "When I return home I will have much to tell, and much to study, too."

Miss Ambrogi said the buildings are no different than she saw on television and in publications.

But the "model of the American people is different."

"I was not sure if I would like Americans," she confessed. "But now I must admit I find Americans very pleasant."

"A&M has a lot to be proud of," she declared. "I am enjoying myself."

Miss Ambrogi has visited NASA, Houston and Dallas. Her friends back home are excited because she is in the United States when man has blasted off and headed for the first man landing on the Moon.

"This is the most exciting time of my life," she related.
