Former 4-H Champion Joins Ag Eco Dept.

Dr. Wayne H. Oberle, a former national winner in 4-H Club leadership and achievement, has joined the Agricultural Economics and Sociology Department.

Dr. H. O. Kunkel, dean of the A&M College of Agriculture, said the new assistant professor holds two degrees from the University of Illinois and the PhD from the University of Missouri.

Reagan Brown, Extension Service sociologist, said Oberle, 28, plans to work in his spare time with Brazos County 4-H youngsters. He will cooperate with Assistant County Agent Larry Boleman and Extension District Agent U. D. Stockard.

Compensation filters to be developed in the research program will eliminate this "corrugated glass" effect, he added.

The Tonto Forest Observatory is used in the underground nuclear detection program, Gangi noted. It is one of the few large arrays in the world used to discriminate between naturally occurring earthquakes and nuclear explosions.

They are important to the proposed nuclear test ban treaty, in that the equipment would be used to detect clandestine underground explosions, Gangi pointed out.

Smith Scholarship Won by Freshman

The new Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd D. Smith $500 Scholarship has its first recipient—Don Eldon McClurg of Tulia, a freshman agricultural engineering major.

The award was established by a group of Tyler business and professional people who are long-time friends of Mr. and Mrs. Smith of 1105 E. 30th St., Bryan. Smith is a widely-known realtor here.

Dr. R. C. Potts, associate dean in the A&M College of Agriculture, said selection for the scholarship is based on high academic standing and need. Its purpose is to encourage outstanding high school students to enroll in agriculture at the university.

Potts said McClurg was a top high school student with a 95 average, was a member of the National Honor Society, and represented the State of Texas at the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

The student is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer McClurg of Route 1, Tulia.

Geophysics Gets Grant To 'Focus' on Array

A $10,000 Texas Instruments, Inc., grant has been awarded the Geophysics Department to "focus" a large array of seismic instruments at the Tonto Forest Seismological Observatory in Arizona.

Research under the one-year Dallas corporation grant will be conducted by Dr. Anthony F. Gangi, associate professor of geophysics.

Gangi said the work will involve determining compensation filters for the seismic array and applying them through a digital computer program to improve the instruments' sensitivity.

"The seismic arrays are similar to large telescopes directed towards the earth's interior, rather than outer space," Gangi explained. "However, variations in crustal structure beneath the arrays degrade acuity, similar to looking through corrugated glass."

AF Cargo Aircraft Added To A&M Fire Fighting Gear

An Air Force C-54 cargo plane has been added to the fire fighting inventory at the Texas Firemen Training Field next to Easterwood Airport.

Instructor John R. Rauch said the plane will be used as a training aid teaching firemen to fight aircraft fires. The aircraft was made available to A&M through the efforts of Chief Sam Taylor, fire chief at Kelly Air Force Base, San Antonio.

The plane was damaged beyond repair during a wind storm. It had been scheduled for delivery to the Republic of Korea Air Force.

The C-54 is 93 feet long, 13 feet high and 10 feet wide. It was cut in half and loaded on a 48-foot trailer loaned to the fire school staff by the Heavy Equipment Operators School.

The heavy equipment and fire school are both part of A&M's

Engineering Extension Station. Rauch said the forward section took one and a half days to transport from San Antonio to College Station. The trip required a special Texas Highway Department permit.

Because of the load size the staff members had to use back roads to miss underpasses.

The rear section required from dawn to dark to reach College Station, Rauch said.

All equipment and instruments had been removed from the plane before it was turned over to the fire school.

Rauch said the fuselage will be put back together and an old fighter fuselage will be scrapped.

Intense training every year during three one-week fire training schools limits the use of a fuselage to about two years, Rauch pointed out.

Alpha Phi Omega to Sponsor Prospective Pledge 'Smoker'

The Alpha Phi Omega fall smoker for prospective pledges will be at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the Assembly Room of the Memorial Student Center.

Male students at A&M who are interested in pledging with APO are invited to attend. Dress will be coat and tie for civilians, class A summer for cadets.

Apartments Receive Praise

brand new. The only complaint I have is that the closets don't have doors, but it's not too hard to put curtains up."

"There's enough space to move around in, and the washer-dryer part is real nice," whispered Mrs. William Ohlmeier, while her husband took a nap on the couch. Mrs. Ohlmeier is a junior majoring in elementary education and Bill is a senior in architectural construction and an Air Force ROTC cadet.

"The thing we like best is the air conditioning, and the apartments are a lot easier to clean," Dave Benesh, Aggie pitching ace, reported.

Dave said he no longer does the laundry on weekends; his wife does it in the apartment.

"Hensel has more cabinet space," Mrs. Benesh said, "but the arrangement here is much better than Hensel because the bedroom is off from the living room. We no longer have to climb over the couch when we have guests for a game."

"I just wish they would do something about the parking lot," Benesh said while pointing to a pair of shoes covered with mud.

Four of the new units are completed, with the other three scheduled for completion by next semester. There are 12 apartments in each unit. The new dwellings are part of a phased program to replace the old barracks type units.

A&M President Earl Rudder said a year ago that the university could not afford to replace all the units at one time, noting that the seven new units cost approximately $1.4 million.

Advisers present will include Dean of Students James P. Hannigan, sectional chairman of the APO East Texas section; Dr. Leslie Reid, Parks and Recreation department head; Maj. Edmond Solomons for Col. Jim McCoy, commandant; and F. Ken Nicholas, a staff assistant in the Commandant's office.

Fall officers are President John Cunningham; Paul A. Mmons, vice-president for operations; Larry Finley, vice-president for programs; and David Weber, vice-president for personnel.

Projects for this fall will include placement of American flags around the parade grounds for reviews and important campus occasions, ticket exchange for home football games, street dances in the Grove for home football games, purchasing of a center pole for the Bonfire; selling of concessions during bonfire; and the Campus Chest drive.
