

Richie Allen Traded To Cards

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rich Allen, the controversial first baseman of the Philadelphia Phillies, was traded to the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday in a seven player deal that could wind up in the office of the commissioner of baseball.

The Phillies sent Allen to the Cardinals for catcher Tim McCarver, outfielder Curt Flood, relief pitcher Joe Hoerner and utility outfielder Byron Browne. St. Louis also acquired infielder Cookie Rojas and pitcher Jerry Johnson.

The trade, however, had hardly cooled off before the 32-year-old Flood, one of baseball's top defensive outfielders and a consistent hitter, announced he has retired from baseball.

"Once the trade is made it still goes," said a Cardinals spokesman. "The Phillies might throw it into the hands of the commissioner. We're out of it."

General manager John Quinn of the Phillies, who engineered the trade with Bing Devine, his St. Louis counterpart, said he had no comment on the Flood development until after he has had a chance to talk with the veteran outfielder. Earlier, at a news conference, Quinn had said the only thing guaranteed in the deal was that all players were physically sound.

Allen, the pivotal figure in the deal, was overjoyed at the news.

"I'm so glad to be out of here (Philadelphia). Six years in this town is enough for anybody. I'm glad to be away from Quinn and all of them. They treat you like cattle."

In a statement released by his public relations agent, Gene Lunn, Flood said: "If I were younger I certainly would enjoy playing for Philadelphia. But under the circumstances, I have decided to retire from organized baseball effective today and remain in St. Louis where I can devote full time to my business interests."

St. Louis obviously gambled that manager Red Schoendienst can accomplish with Allen what former Phillies' managers Gene Mauch and Bob Skinner couldn't — get the budding superstar to conform to club rules. Allen takes with him a history of trouble, including fines and suspensions.
