CADET SLOUCH by Jim Earle

200 Kids Expected At Halloween Party

More than 200 children from ages 2 to 12 are expected to attend the annual Halloween Party sponsored by the Apartment Council Friday.

Gus Berges, council vice president, said the party will be at 6:30 p.m. in the parking lot next to the quonset hut where apartment rents are paid.

He said various booths will be set up by the council members with games such as apple-dunking and bean bag throwing. A contest will be held to determine the best costume and a prize will be given.

The vice president noted that the prizes offered at the event were donated by the Bryan-College Station business community. Homemade cookies and refreshments will also be served.

The council has set the entrance fee at 25 cents per child, but Berges said Apartment Council activity cards will exempt holders from any fees for their children. The cards can be obtained from council representatives.

The cards will also provide admission to the Civilian Weekend activities, as well as other scheduled events during the year, Berges said.

Soil Judging Team Competing in Lubbock

The soil judging team is on its way to compete in the Regional 4 Soil Judging Contest today and Friday in Lubbock.

Coach J. F. Mills of the Soil and Crop Sciences Department said the five-state area of Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Mississippi and Arkansas will be represented in the competition.

A&M team members are Roger Blackwelder of Pilot Point, Fred Minzenmayer of Winters, Michael of Garden City, Darrell Engel of Rosebud and Carroll Holse of Skidmore. All are agronomy majors.

Mills said the contest is sponsored by the American Society of Agronomy.

Board Member Gives Businessmen Tour

Texas A&M System board member Peyton McKnight Jr. of Tyler hosted 11 East Texas businessmen on a tour of the campus Wednesday.

Coordinating the all-day tour were Robert G. Cherry, assistant to Texas A&M President Earl Rudder, and Dorsey E. McCrory, director of development.

The group attended a luncheon at Shiba Hall hosted by President Rudder and McKnight. Also attending were six representatives of Humble Oil Co., Houston, who had presented Humble Oil Education Foundation grants totaling $17,500 that morning. President Rudder spoke to the two groups on the educational scope of the university.

During the day, the East Texas group heard reports from Dean George Kunze of the Graduate College, who spoke on graduate education and research; Dean Richard S. Wainerdi, associate dean of engineering and head of the Activation Analysis Laboratory, who discussed special and off-campus programs, and Dean L. S. Pope, associate dean of administrative affairs, College of Agriculture, who projected East Texas beef production opportunities.

The business leaders also toured the Cyclotron Institute, new library, Teague Space Research Center, veterinary medicine facilities and observed Aggie football practice.

McKnight's guests included C. F. Hawn of Athens and Herman L. Kidd, M. J. Harvey, Bob Murdock, Art Exum, Jack M. King, H. M. Bell Jr., H. E. Jenkins, J. Harold Stringer, B. G. Hartley and Harry Loftis, all of Tyler.

Architects to Present Halloween Exhibit

A second-year design class in the College of Architecture will have the college's third annual Halloween Exhibit in the main lobby of the Architecture building from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. today and Friday.

Situation Dangerous

"Many people said that there are no girls in this area, but I disagree with those who said so. If you look for girls you find them," he remarked.

"I am glad I came to this university because both the staff, the student body and the curriculum are excellent," he commented.

"I have noticed that most of the students have a real desire and attitude for learning, instead of looking for troubles and creating embarrassing situations that go against the development of the educational programs," he pointed out.

Garcia-Godoy Pastoriza plans to go to graduate school. Commenting about his future plans, Garcia-Godoy said that he is not going to follow his father and grandfather in politics. They both were presidents of the Dominican Republic.

"I will work with two uncles who are businessmen in the second largest city of my country, Santiago," he said, emphasizing his desire not to be involved directly in the national political affairs.

More Open Dialog

Other committees in the local chapter are A, academic freedom and tenure; B, academic responsibility and professional ethics; F, national organization membership, and S, rights and freedoms of students.

Earlier Hopkins gave the estimated group of 40 of the chapter's 180 members a report on the status of the case of Dr. Leon W. Gibbs, professor of veterinary medicine, who was dismissed by the university in January after a hearing last fall.

The university had charged Gibbs on nine counts of misconduct in April, 1967, an action which resulted in censure by the national AAUP in the same month on charges that the university had denied Gibbs academic due process.

Hopkins, who based his report on correspondence with the national organization this fall, said that the AAUP, in reviewing the Gibbs affair, sees that much of the case centers on complex procedural problems.

The AAUP, by letter, suggested that the national organization communicate directly with the administration to try to resolve some of these problems.

Hopkins noted that this type of communication has not as yet taken place. He added that when he asked A&M President Earl Rudder what the local AAUP chapter could do for the university this year, Rudder replied that they could try to get A&M off the censure list.

The chapter president said the local group sent a letter to the AAUP asking that this be done, and the AAUP has replied that it "would like to do whatever is possible to remove the censure from A&M."

He noted that censure is usually lifted only with the approval of the majority of the AAUP members attending the organization's annual convention. Hopkins added that correspondence is continuing.

"He's doing terrific with these problems! Either he's smarter than I or else he thinks like my prof!"
